

Haliburton County says

NO

Only three of 14 areas like Accord

by MARTHA PERKINS

The people of Haliburton County are true Canadians. As yesterday's referendum results suggest, we are divided along regional lines.

But if you have to place the Highlands somewhere in Canada, using the results as a guide, then the county belongs in the nay-saying West.

Of the 6,904 people who voted in polls across the county, 3,920 of them voted No, or 56.8%. In fact, only the people in West

56.8% of county voters say No

Guilford, Ingoldsby and Haliburton village had a slim majority of Yes voters. The strongest constitutional ties are in Ingoldsby, the weakest in Gooderham.

Of course, in light of the current rivalry between Haliburton and Minden over healthcare facilities, the two villages had to have different results. In Haliburton, 768 people voted Yes, and 752 voted No, giving the Yes forces a very slight 50.5% lead. The only poll which clearly endorsed the Yes campaign was at Extendicare, where eight seniors voted Yes and only one voted No. In Minden, 616 people voted Yes, 746 people voted No and this gave the No side a 54.8% victory.

Overall, the smaller the village, the more likely a No vote.

Here is a break-down of the vote by area:

Dorset: 158 Yes, 181 No or 46.6% and 53.4%

West Guilford: 228 Yes, 217 No or 51.2% and 48.8%

Carnarvon: 385 Yes, 434 No or 47% and 53%

Eagle Lake: 145 Yes, 153 No or 48.7% and 51.3%

Ingoldsby: 127 Yes, 96 No or 57% and 43%

Harcourt: 111 Yes, 204 No or 35.2% and 64.8%

Gelert: 87 Yes, 155 No or 36% and 64%

Lochlin: 82 Yes, 108 No or 43.2% and 56.8%

Gooderham: 124 Yes, 258 No or 32.5% and 67.5%

Tory Hill: 50 Yes, 89 No or 36% and 64%

Wilberforce: 100 Yes, 190 No or 34.5% and 65.5%

Cardiff: 231 Yes, 337 No or 41.6% and 59.4%

Downed hydro strikes out Jay game in 11th

by MARTHA PERKINS

No. Say it isn't so. It's a joke, right? Come on, turn the lights back on.

If the Toronto Blue Jays thought it was tense at the Fullton County Stadium in Atlanta on Saturday night, they should have been in Haliburton when with less than five minutes to go, the power went off in two thirds of the county. Television screens flickered and faded quickly to black. It was as if the world ended.

The timing was too horrible to be true. It was the bottom of the 11th inning in the sixth, heart-

Highway 121 and the Old Buckhorn Road broke. When one hand claps in the wilderness, no one might hear it; but when one lonely insulator falls onto a major hydro phase that feeds Haliburton village, Eagle Lake, Tory Hill, Wilberforce and Gooderham, the message quickly gets around.

"It was just one of those acts of God," says Ontario Hydro's area line supervisor, Jim Davies, who was watching the game at home three miles east of Minden when the lights went out. His first thought was an intoxicated reveller had crashed into a power line. "I was cursing Ontario Hydro too."

palpitating game of the World Series. A win, and the favourite American sport would be draped for the first time in a red and white maple leaf.

Two innings earlier, the Atlanta Braves had stubbornly evened the score 2-2 and now it looked as if they could do it again. The score was 4-3 for the Jays, who were starting to make mistakes. The Braves had one out, but a runner on third base had his gaze firmly fixed on home plate. There was another runner eager to follow.

Would the Jays choke? Were Canada's aspirations about to be rent by a tomahawk chop? Could the fans survive any more tension?

Then, unbeknownst to the hundreds of fans gathered around television screens, an eight-year-old insulator at the corner of

"It was predicted," says Michael O'Hara, who was bartending at a packed McKeck's Place. "The Jays were making errors and someone sitting at the bar said the only thing worse that could happen was a power failure."

When the lights went out, the patron turned to O'Hara and said "You're kidding, right?"

Craig Saunders wasn't kidding either. He was bartending at the Golden Slipper at the PineStone and "the funniest thing was I had made a joke about an hour earlier that wouldn't it be funny if the power went out."

Funny indeed. At quarter to one, the screen went blank and the dozens of patrons sat with disbelief written all over their faces - which, fortunately for any

DAY OF RECKONING: There was a slow but steady trickle of voters at the Haliburton Legion on "referendum day." After weeks of pondering both sides of the issue, voters such as Mary Hastings and Peter Epps had to boil all their opinions down to a simple Yes or No. For many, there was nothing simple about it.

Haliburton beds get government go-ahead

Funding for three supportive housing projects and the addition of 15 new long-term care beds for Haliburton Hospital has been fast-tracked to the county, the MPP for Victoria-Haliburton announced last Tuesday.

In an address to the Haliburton County Planning and Development Committee, MPP Dennis Drainville said his announcement of new long-term care services was the government's response to the committee's recent motion indicating a need for better services for seniors and adults with physical disabilities.

"This funding will improve the quality of life for area seniors and adults with physical disabilities by providing them with services that help them to remain in their own communities as long as possible. But the continuum of long-term care services must also provide those who are no longer able to remain in their own homes with a residential care alternative when they need it," Drainville said.

The government has approved annual funding of $150,000 for three supportive housing projects in Monmouth, Minden and Haliburton. These housing units will serve up to 170 residents and provide emergency response, meal programs, tenant service co-ordination and accessible apartments. Sponsors of the projects are Staunworth Non-Profit Housing Corporation, Haliburton Community Housing and Monmouth Non-Profit Housing Corporation. Specific details of the three projects are being discussed and developed by the planning committee as well as community service providers and the project sponsors.

The approval of the 15 beds to Haliburton Hospital is the first phase of the planning committee's efforts to improve services in the county. As to who will get the remaining 15 long-term beds, well, that has yet to be determined. The decision where to place the beds will be based on the recommendations made by a feasibility study being conducted by the planning committee on the future role of Minden Hospital and Hyland Crest.

"This is a response to the citizens and residents of Haliburton County and also to the needs and concerns raised by this committee," said Drainville.

After the announcement, planning committee member Chris Hodgson thanked Drainville for acting so quickly on the recommendations of the committee.

MVA gets the axe from county council

by JANET HURLEY
Staff Reporter

After a summer of meetings, heated discussions and political wrangling, market-value assessment has been handed its death sentence.

County council voted to reject the proposed tax formula at last Wednesday's meeting. The recorded vote, 10 against and five in favour of MVA, essentially killed the plan and confirmed the status quo.

Council's action ends months of debate which split the County over the proposed plan to assess the value of properties based on the price a buyer and a seller of a property could agree on in 1988.

MVA was proposed to replace the now complicated tax formula which now assesses properties in certain municipalities at different values, and to create greater equity among the municipalities. If it had been accepted, half of the county's 10 municipalities would see an increase in taxes while the other half would experience a decrease.

The debate has been ongoing since early May when county councillors decided to hold a series of public meetings so that the public and municipal councillors could express their opinions.

Even though County council's vote was scheduled for last week's meeting, Warden George Simmons introduced the resolution with a suggestion that council delay the vote.

"To me, there is a reason to delay. We'd still be on course for assessment. If we turn it down, we're at the bottom of the heap for assessment in years to come. If we delay it, we could see what Toronto is going to do and what the Fair Tax study is going to do. It will leave the door open," Simmons said.

Metropolitan Toronto is in the midst of its own debate over MVA. Councillors from Toronto and Haliburton alike have suggested waiting until the provincial Fair Tax Commission comes out with its study on tax reform in the coming year.

However, this argument didn't fly.

"We've got a chance here to put to bed something that has opinionated thought from every area of the county. I'm not for delaying it at all," said Anson, Hindon and Minden Deputy Reeve Lewis Stevens.

"If we're going to deal with it, we should deal with it now. As far as the Fair Tax Commission, I don't think it will provide us with any answers," said Glamorgan Reeve Beverly MacDuff.

"Stanhope would like to vote today," said Stanhope Reeve Fred Gardner. "Deferring would not, in the public's eye, give credit to this council."

Lutterworth Reeve Cam Ecclestone agreed. "I'd like to vote on it today. Otherwise it will be like beating a dead horse from today on."

Once council unanimously agreed to hold the vote, councillors in support of MVA urged their colleagues to come on side.

Bicroft Reeve Hans Stevens voiced his concern over the decisions made by the municipalities of Anson, Hindon and Minden. Lutterworth and Cardiff to take a stand against MVA before the issue was voted on at the county level. And he asked other municipalities not to follow their lead.

"My municipality pays more on levies than other municipalities and I don't think it's fair. If you are for fairness and you want to put this county on a level playing field, vote for MVA."

Reeve MacDuff, whose own municipality already has MVA, told councillors to look at the whole picture.

"I think we should put our own feeling aside and deal with it at the county level."

However, when it came down to the vote, MVA was defeated. Those councillors who voted No to MVA were AHM Deputy-Reeve Lewis Stevens, Cardiff Reeve Thomas Elliott and Deputy-Reeve Dan Rivett, Dysart et al Reeve Chris Hodgson, Lutterworth Reeve Cam Ecclestone and Deputy-Reeve Jim McMahon, Monmouth Reeve Keith Tallman, Sherborne et al Reeve Ross Rabjohn, and Stanhope Reeve Fred Gardner and Deputy-Reeve Eleanor Harrison.

Councillors voting in support of MVA were Bicroft Reeve Hans Stevens, Glamorgan Reeve Beverly MacDuff and Deputy-Reeve Glen Madill, Sherborne et al Deputy-Reeve Hans Liebmann, and Snowdon Reeve and Warden George Simmons, who in handing down his Yes vote said he was doing so "for the sake of the county."

Council hits the road

by JANET HURLEY

Staff Reporter

The following brief reports are of items discussed at last Wednesday's regular meeting of County Council:

Council takes to the road

County Council, the travelling road show, may soon be coming to a location near you after the Social Services Department takes over council's current chamber.

A new computer and a growing staff have squeezed the Social Services Department out of its present home in the basement of the registry office. And so Council has agreed to spend up to $20,000 in renovations to the County Building to accommodate the department in the council chamber.

But this leaves council out in the cold with no where to meet — at least until plans are confirmed whether council will build a new office or add on to the present location. Councillors will have to find alternate places to accommodate council meetings before December rolls around because the Social Services Department plans to move into its new digs by then.

The schedule for the start of renovations has yet to be determined as council did not announce it would be tendering out the project.

Northern roots

A quick glimpse at an Ontario map would reveal

Haliburton County is certainly in the southern half of the province. And a call to the provincial government would reveal that the county is considered part of Southern Ontario for program and funding purposes.

But if County Council has its way, Haliburton County will soon be designated the way the councillors believe it should be — as part of Northern Ontario.

Council agreed to petition the provincial government to add the County of Haliburton to the area which is designated as Northern Ontario in order to benefit and participate in the programs established specifically for northern communities.

The motion was brought forth by Dysart et al Reeve Chris Hodgson who first mentioned the idea to the Minister of Transportation Gilles Pouliot at the recent County roads tour. Hodgson asked if funding for county roads came out of Southern or Northern Ontario funding. Pouliot said Haliburton must share monies with the south. Pouliot then said he would consider a boundary change if County Council passed a motion.

Council feels Haliburton County, because of its Canadian Shield roots, should be considered part of the north. The physical features as well as the economy of the county are similar to other northern communities which have been recognized for special programming by the provincial government due to the barriers to development and prosperity in the region.

Untangling disentanglement

Glamorgan Reeve Beverly MacDuff wants Council to make some decisions on restructuring the county before the province does.

"We should look at restructuring seriously and come up with suggestions and a decision some time in '93 on what direction we will take. If we don't do it, the province will and we may not like what the province dictates to us," MacDuff told The Echo after the indicating her intention to move a resolution on the issue next month.

"The province has talked of restructuring for decades and through disentanglement, this directive will inevitably happen."

Disentanglement is the process through which the provincial government hopes to redefine the roles provincial and municipal government play in providing services to the public. The province wants to hand over the responsibility for policing, waste management and roads, among other services, to the municipalities while taking over 100 per cent of the cost of the general welfare system.

Although municipalities have been promised unconditional grants to relieve the initial stress of disentanglement, Reeve MacDuff expressed concern that the municipalities have not been advised as to how the process will be accomplished and whether the grants will be enough to com-

Plans for bridge progress

by JANET HURLEY

Staff Reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at last Thursday's regular meeting of Anson, Hindon and Minden Council:

Bridge notes

Council has set the foundations for the possible construction of a bridge across the Gull River.

A steering committee will be established to look into the feasibility of having the army build the bridge over the river near St. Paul's Church. Council suggested the committee consist of representatives from Minden B.I.A., the roads department, the by-law officer and members of the snowmobile association as they were the ones to initially push for the project.

Council's action on the issue was in response to a letter received from Captain T.E. De Jager of the 2nd Field Engineer Regiment who suggested a meeting be set up between representatives from the municipality and representatives from National Defence.

Questioning the safety of drinking this coffee, Brown phoned Kenney's to ask if the coffee was any good.

Retired NHL hockey players score

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

It may be years since they last played hockey professionally, but three retired NHLers who now live in the Highlands are once again savouring victory. Only this time their team is the NHL Players Association and their opponent is the organization they once devoted body and soul to.

After years of being pushed to the boards, the Association has given a body check to the National Hockey League, which has been unwilling to share the spoils of a retirement fund. Last week, a judge agreed that the players who retired before 1982 — and that includes local businessmen Ron Stackhouse, Walt McKechnie and Glen Sharpley — are entitled to a bigger piece of the fund's pie.

For many players, it's more a victory of principle than of money. Right now, even a hockey giant such as Gordie Howe receives an annual pension of approximately $12,000. The court decision will probably double or triple the pension for the older players, depending on how long they played. For those who have fallen on rough times, at least it will be enough to live on.

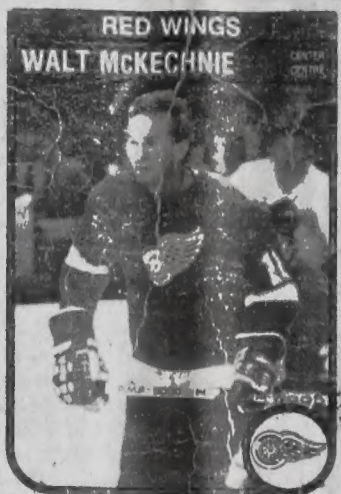

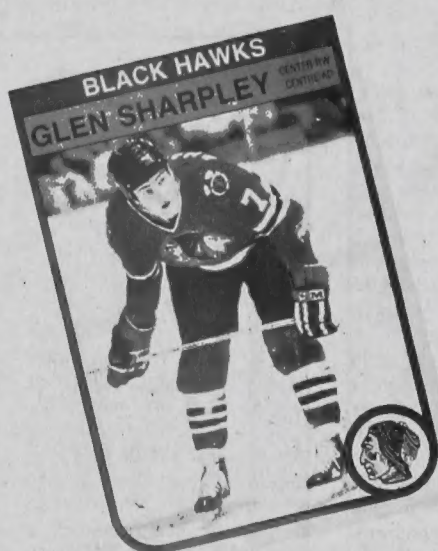

"It's not a lot of money but it would make a big difference to a lot of guys and that's what it's all about," says McKechnie, who now owns McKechnie's Place in Haliburton. Someone who retires from a unionized job today has a much bigger pension than the "group of seven" NHL players who initiated the lawsuit, big names such as Gordie Howe, Bobby Hull and Eddie Shack.

"A lot of the oldtimers who started the Association, there wasn't any consideration given to them," McKechnie says.

"I'm glad for the players because I think it was something that legitimately belonged to us," agrees Stackhouse, who was the first Highlander to make it to the big leagues. He now owns Halco Electronics and is on a year's leave of absence from his high school teaching position.

Although in professional hockey "you quickly discover you're

Judge's decision to award players a bigger piece of the retirement pie gives three local businessmen something to celebrate chattel," Stackhouse says "it always bothered me that if the money was legitimately ours, why weren't we allowed to keep it, especially if it was going to the younger players..."

"We all signed the contract (during our professional years and agreed to the salary.) I don't begrudge the money the players are making today. The part that bothers me is the fact that the older players have been used in some ways. There's no question the teams took advantage of the players but the court case shows that we weren't allowed to keep (the money from the retirement fund.)"

The fund was established and paid for by the NHL. However, it made more money than the league expected and instead of putting the profits back into the fund, the NHL siphoned the money to the younger players, who earn astronomical salaries compared to the older players, even when inflation is taken into account. The Association says those high salaries were partly made possible because the owners dipped into the retirement fund.

Stackhouse played 13 years, primarily with the Pittsburgh Penguins. When he started, the top salary was $30,000; when he retired it had reached $100,000. "If I retired now I would get $26,000 a year [almost triple his present pension] and a quarter of a million dollars at age 55." He laughs. "If I thought I could last more than a shift, I'd be back."

The more recent pension scheme, which allows players to collect if they've played 400 games and entitles them to the $250,000, is what bothers McKechnie, who played 955 games during his 16-year career. "That is our money and we knew it and couldn't do anything about it."

"It's certainly good news for all of us," says Glen Sharpley, owner of Sharpley Sports in Haliburton, whose hockey career ended with an eye injury. Like the others, however, he's hoping that any appeal by the NHL will quickly be squashed.

Power outage steals last crucial minutes of Jays' game from fans sensitive people in the crowd, you couldn't read because the rest of the room was shrouded in instant darkness as well. "A lot of people thought it was a practical joke. The security guard went to the breaker box to make sure no one was playing a joke."

"No one knew what to make of it," says Malcolm Maxwell, owner of the Northwood Inn, which was also crowded with Jays fans. "It was a little hectic."

"The place emptied in about two minutes," O'Hara says. After a few minutes of stunned disbelief and frenzied shouts of "No way!", everyone ran to their cars to turn on the radio and find a station broadcasting the game. At both McKechnie's and the PineStone, a verbal Pony Express was established.

It all happened quickly. By the time they reached their cars, a second Brave was out. "Two down, Mike Timlin is pitching for the Jays. Otis Nixon is at bat," someone would shout, and then someone would shout the news to someone else in the bar. "Otis Nixon bunts the ball. It's thrown to first. Joe Carter catches it. He's out!"

The screams of jubilation could be heard, quite literally a mile around. (The shouts and honking horns woke up a waitress at McKechnie's whose house is a mile out of town.)

"It was a mini Yonge Street," O'Hara says of the mood on Highland Street. "It was incredible."

Al Richards, the PineStone's general manager, was so caught up in the excitement of it all he bought everyone a round of drinks. "The place erupted in cheers" — even before Richards' offer, says Saunders.

"We didn't have any problems," says Const. Mark McMaster of the OPP office in Haliburton. "We could hear people shouting" but there were no disturbances. The evening had already been disturbing enough.

Bantams coach survives near-fatal fall

Tim Woods makes slow recovery with a little help from his friends

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

The hearts and minds of the county have been with Tim Woods and his family after his near-fatal accident at the Minden arena on Tuesday night.

Expected home from hospital either yesterday or today (Tuesday), the Bantams hockey coach came within an hour of death after accidentally hitting his head on the ice during a practice session.

"With Tim and (his wife) Rickie being so popular, it's just amazing how everyone wants to help out," says Sue Eskilen, whose husband Al manages the Minden Bantams. "This is what it's all about, all this caring. It's pretty wonderful."

"They're overwhelmed by how much community support they're getting. People are really concerned about them," says Wendy Ladurantaye, who like other family friends, has been deluged with phone calls for updates on his condition. "Rickie says that's what's helping her get through this. Just knowing that there's all this support keeps them going."

"You realize there are a lot of people who genuinely care about you and they want to do whatever they can."

The accident has also jolted the local hockey communities. The day after the accident, coaches arrived at the Minden arena — wearing helmets. Woods, like all other coaches, wasn't wearing a helmet on Tuesday night when he was on the ice demonstrating a skating maneuver to a Bantam player. In a fluke accident, he lost his balance and fell, hitting the back of head against the ice.

"The funny thing is that when he's playing with the Minden Oldtimers, he dresses like he's going to war," says friend Bruce Turner, who introduced the safety-conscious Woods to hockey a few years ago.

Few coaches ever think they need protection. However, Woods hit the ice with enough force to knock him unconscious. He was taken to Minden Hospital by ambulance, where it was first thought he just had a concussion. Then Woods' vital signs changed and the hospital had a true emergency on its hands. Because it was snowing, the air ambulance could not be called and Woods was rushed by land ambulance to St. Michael's Hospital in Toronto. Once there, a CAT scan revealed that Woods' head was bleeding internally. Because the blood had nowhere else to go, it was putting pressure on his brain. He was taken immediately to surgery.

Neurosurgeons said that Woods would have died in the next hour had they not drained the blood clot and stopped the bleeding.

His recovery has been slow and painful, but everyone is optimistic. For the first two days, Woods was in intensive care receiving one-on-one, 24-hour nursing care. Two days later he was transferred to the neurological ward.

By Sunday, the father of four was up and walking. But his head continued to ache and he was often disoriented.

"You can tell that it's hard for him and he's tired, but he's definitely doing better," says Ladurantaye, who visited him on Thursday. Karen Turner, who went down to Toronto on Wednesday to be with Mrs. Woods, says "they removed the cause (of the bleeding) and now he has to recuperate. The neurosurgeon is very optimistic. It's just going to take awhile."

Meanwhile, Mrs. Woods has constantly been by her husband's bedside since Tuesday evening

when she was called to the Minden Hospital. The Woods are a very close family, and she was extremely worried about being away from her children for so long. But after coming home for one evening, she realized it was too difficult to travel between Toronto and their Blairhampton home. The children — Amanda and Dennis in high school and Katie and Trevor in elementary school — stayed with friends who did everything they could to ease their fears. On Saturday, Bruce Turner drove the children to Toronto for an emotional reunion.

The Woods are very well known and liked throughout the county. Mrs. Woods is a potter and Mr. Woods is a carpenter; both work out of their home. They are very active in community events, especially the Studio tour, and this is a busy time of year for them as they prepare special orders for Christmas.

Because people who are self-employed are not eligible for unemployment insurance, part of the county's concern has been for the family's financial wellbeing. The Minden Minor Hockey Association is trying to find out whether its insurance covers coaches as well as players and there has been a genuine desire among many people to ensure that the Woods just have to concentrate on being together and returning to health. Fundraising activities are being planned, but if people want to help the Woods, they can contact Wendy and Brian Ladurantaye at 286-2088 or the Turners at 457-2767.

The Bantams are also letting Woods know that he is not far from their thoughts. Saturday's game against Ops was dedicated to their popular coach, and with much spirit, the Bantams won the game 4-0.

Friends are also rallying around the family, volunteering to fulfill commitments until the Woods' life returns to normal.

"Everybody wants to help," says Ladurantaye, adding that the highly self-sufficient couple are not accustomed to letting others do things for them. "They're always the ones who are there for others and right now it's difficult not to be in control."

Judging by the community's profusion of support, the Woods are finding that their family is much larger than they once thought.

After-school care leaves parents in a fix

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Surrounded by glass doors and windows, Beryl O'Connor is not comfortable using her store as an after-school playground for her two school-age children.

But she is even more uncomfortable about sending nine-year-old Keenan and seven-year-old Sheena home to an empty house.

So every weekday, the two youngsters get off the school bus near the family's store, Highland Glass and Windows, in Haliburton. Their mother then drives them home, dropping by WeeCare to pick up their four-year-old sister.

If her husband and the other employees are out on a job, Mrs. O'Connor must close the store so she can stay with her children at home. Invariably, the next day someone is bound to say "I was here at 4:15 but the store was closed." That's not a way to run a business.

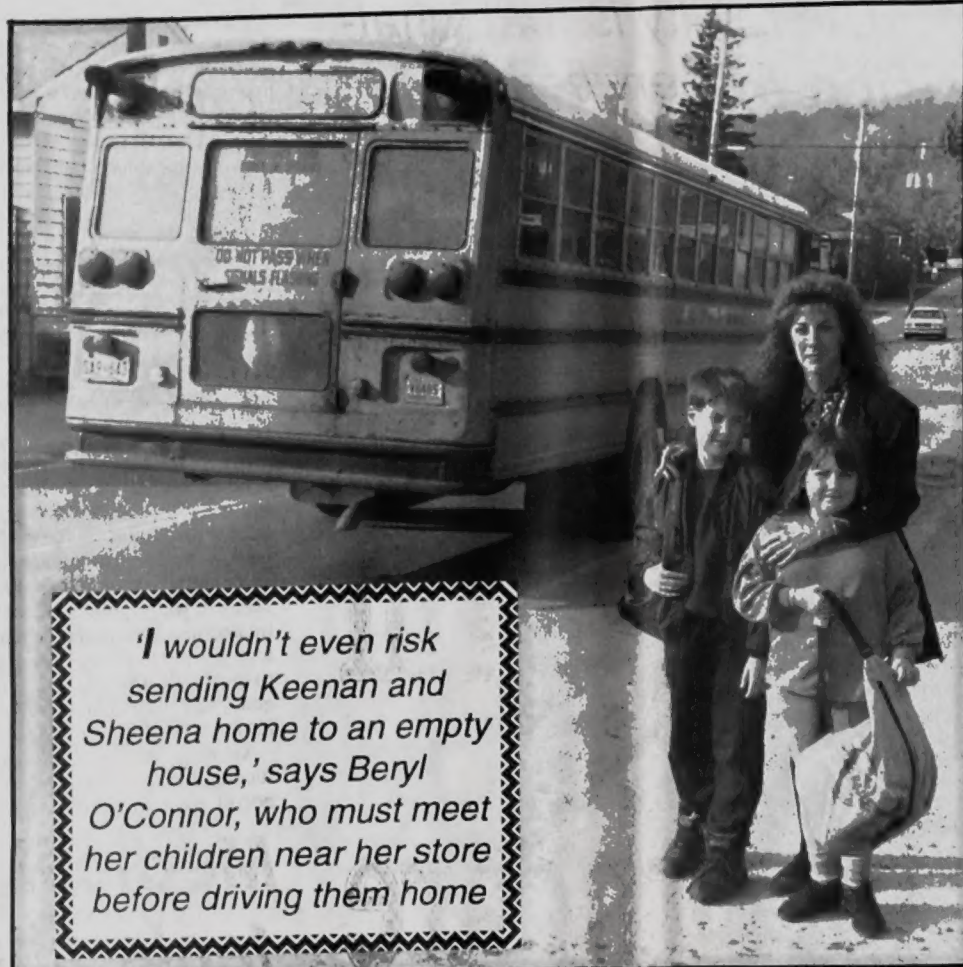

Yet the option of sending the children home alone is equally unattractive. "I wouldn't even risk it because that would be the time something would happen and I couldn't forgive myself."

The law supports Mrs. O'Connor's decision. It is illegal to leave children younger than 12 unattended. And yet today, with so many working mothers, she is not the only one wondering how many Highlands children are going home to empty houses.

Marie Hodgson at WeeCare thinks she has a solution. WeeCare has applied to the Board of Education to establish an after-school daycare program. Funding would come entirely from parents' fees of $4 a day per child and there would be no costs to the board. WeeCare would provide a licensed childcare worker for every 15 children as required by law, but would also hire an assistant. Programs, crafts and games would be geared to children aged six to 12.

Because of Haliburton's complex busing system, Mrs. Hodgson thinks that J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School is the ideal location. Children from Victoria Street School are already first bused to the school, and are accustomed to making transfers there. A WeeCare employee would meet them at the bus and the older children (who are students at JDHES) could simply go straight to the designated area.

She would like use of the library or classroom, gym and outdoor play area until six p.m.. WeeCare would be responsible for leaving

'I wouldn't even risk sending Keenan and Sheena home to an empty house,' says Beryl O'Connor, who must meet her children near her store before driving them home the areas clean.

Even though there may be other buildings, such as churches, which would be suitable, Mrs. Hodgson says busing logistics make any other location unfeasible. One or two young students are already dropped off at WeeCare but bus drivers do not like dropping children off anywhere other than their home or parents' business. Drivers may not appreciate having to stop at another location which is not on their way. Simplicity is essential, especially since some children may only use the service one or two days a week.

Mrs. O'Connor thinks an after school program at JDHES is a marvellous idea, and not just because it would make her life easier. "Everyone forgets about these in-between kids who are not old enough to take care of themselves. They get off the bus and they're all raring to go. They need activities."

However, the board's management committee is split. At an October meeting, three members voted in favour of the proposal - Wally Bunn, John Munro and Nancy Stinson - and three members were opposed - Leroy Eager, Wayne Wood and committee chairperson Nancy Dunford.

"We didn't feel we had enough information to make a decision," Mrs. Dunford says. "We felt we needed more time to research it."

"I think it's needed in this town," says Stinson, who felt confident about WeeCare's ability to run the program with little impact on school staff. The issue will come to a vote again at the next management committee meeting in November.

At King George Elementary School in Peterborough, after-school daycare was introduced last year and was so successful, the daycare is now provided before school as well.

"I'm happy with it," says Principal Don Luther. "It's certainly helped the 15 to 20 kids who attend. We had students who were going home to an empty house and when you're in Grade 1 or 2, that can be pretty scary."

The key to success is location, he says. At King George, the daycare is held in the basement where there are washrooms, the library and a small gym. The children can use the gym and equipment on the provision that anything damaged is paid for by the program. The children also have a lot of outdoor activities.

There is very "minimal" impact on the custodial staff because the daycare cleans up after itself and teachers who stay after school are not inconvenienced either.

Marie Hodgson notes that in a 1991 consultant's study, parents identified after-school care as their number one problem. Some parents had children staying at their business until closing time, some parents had flexible hours and could leave work early, some parents had a neighbour or relative take care of the children, and some children did indeed go home to an empty house.

The law says after-school daycare must have a separate area for older children. In Minden, the CHACE Daycare has an after-school program in the basement, away from the younger children. It is not feasible to build an addition onto WeeCare, and there would still be the busing problem.

For the program at JDHES, Mrs. Hodgson could apply for a $4,000 start-up grant to buy the proper toys and crafts. After that, the program is self-supporting.

WeeCare wants to fill need by setting up a new program which offers supervised activities for children aged 6 to 12

St. Joseph's administrator denies allegations he is orchestrating demise of Minden Hospital

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Any suggestions that he is personally orchestrating the demise of the Minden Hospital are "blatantly untrue and unfair," says the executive director of St. Joseph's Hospital.

"All we've done is support a recommendation that came from the community in the first place," says Frank Lussing, who in the past few weeks has been accused of wanting to close the province's smallest hospital. (The Peterborough hospital owns both the Minden and Haliburton Hospitals.)

Like many others, he is awaiting the results of a feasibility study which will investigate the possibility of amalgamating the Minden Hospital with Hyland Crest, the county-owned senior citizens home in Minden.

"In the end, whatever happens will be the result of the recommendations of the Haliburton County Planning and Development Committee," he says. The committee, which was formed to implement a provincial promise to build up to 30 new long-term care beds in Haliburton County, is a co-sponsor of the study. "We need the consultants to tell us what they think is reasonable."

Sonya Holliday-Rhodes has expressed fear that if the amalgamation takes place, Minden will lose its seven adult and two pediatric acute care beds at the hospital. Lussing says "there will be in-patient care provided in any facility. That's not something we can take away, nor would we want to... The reality is that whatever services are available in two facilities will continue to be available in a consolidated facility."

In explaining the sequence of events, Lussing says that two years ago the province established a steering committee to look at health and social service issues in the Highlands. One of the options it suggested was the possibility of amalgamating the hospital and seniors' home. "St. Joseph's wasn't part of the planning process. That was the first time we were made aware of that as an option."

St. Joseph's first option would have been a new facility built on the Allsaw Flats, but the province soon let it be known this was too rich a project for these economic times. Still, the amalgamation option looked attractive, so Lussing says St. Joseph's established an ad hoc committee. It included himself; the two Highlands board representatives, Haddyn Gillespie and Doug Campbell; the two hospital administrators; Dr. Anthony Holliday-Rhodes of Minden and Dr. Norm Bottom of Haliburton; and the chairman of the board, Bob Phillips.

"We thought it was a really interesting idea," Lussing says, "because it will allow Minden to get a new facility and allows us to look at some more role issues which would reflect the needs of the community... If the community is willing, we'd do what we can to facilitate it."

Once the planning and development committee was established, it asked for proposals and St. Joseph's sent in a request for the feasibility study. It was eventually endorsed by the committee and county council.

This is all taking place when fiscal restraints "are adding an urgency" to the debate. The amalgamation would be very cost effective but "it really needs to be proven objectively." Hence the feasibility study.

There are two side issues to the debate. The Minden medical community thinks Lussing wants to replace present acute care facilities with an expanded emergency department, which they say would be impossible. (Lussing was unable to attend last week's meeting because he was very ill.)

In previous discussions, Lussing said he mentioned holding beds for people who need to be stabilized and assessed. Such beds, which are common in larger hospitals, are unavailable in Minden, where patients are either treated and sent home or admitted. "People have construed that to mean I only want an emergency department" but that's not his intention, Lussing says.

As well, discussions about funding restraints have led to the belief he wants to close the Minden Hospital as a solution to a deficit problem. "We've worked with the Ministry of Health long and hard to convince them of the real difficulties of reducing costs in small hospitals without compromising services," he says. St. Joseph's has just cut $1.5-million from its $36-million budget with minimal impact. Such cost cutting would not be possible in the Highlands. Lussing now has reason to believe the Ministry is listening, and will support the hospitals until the planning committee resolves the long-term health issues.

However, as executive director, Lussing must also be prepared for the worst. "Unless something happens, we will have no option but to limit services, but we feel the Ministry will work with us and give us the benefit of the doubt."

"To be alarmist, really if anything frightens people more than it helps. (With provincial changes) we need to accept things will not remain as they are."

Medical community feels shut-out from planning committee

by JANET HURLEY

Staff Reporter

The committee formed to implement changes to the long-term health care system in Haliburton does not represent the interests of the medical community, says a health care advocate.

Sonya Holliday-Rhodes, who is campaigning against what she claims is a plan to close Minden Hospital, accused the Haliburton County Planning and Development Committee of not listening to the concerns of doctors, nurses and senior citizens.

"No members of this committee know anything from the medical perspective. That is concerning the general public. Decisions are being made by non-professional people," she told committee members at last Tuesday's meeting.

Speaking on behalf of the medical staff in Minden, Holliday-Rhodes added, "I feel that we'd be happy to replace members of the committee who now have conflicts of interest."

However, she did not expand on the nature of the conflicts of interest.

In response, MPP Dennis Drainville said he was confident the committee's work entailed a consultative process.

"I would assume all the way through discussion, doctors from this area would be involved."

Committee Chairman Jack Brezina stressed the fact that the selection of the committee was done in a public fashion and anyone was welcomed to apply. He also assured Holliday-Rhodes that it would be presumptuous of the committee to go forth with a feasibility study without first consulting with the medical community.

Committee has Dysart agenda, Mindenite says

by JANET HURLEY

Staff Reporter

A letter to the Haliburton County Planning and Development Committee which charges members are not honourably performing their task of providing the best solution for long-term care beds, has prompted the committee to undertake a public awareness campaign.

A decision to co-ordinate a press release package to tell the public what the committee is doing and in which direction it is headed came about in response to a letter from Bryan Kernohan.

In his letter, Kernohan says that the recent recommendation by the committee to place 15 long-term health care beds at Haliburton Hospital is a political

New long-term care beds given welcomed but cautious praise

by MARTHA PERKINS

Although they are extremely happy that the province has appeared to give the go-ahead to a 15-bed expansion at the Haliburton Hospital, many of the people who have fought long and hard for the beds aren't dancing in the streets. Yet.

"I think it's wonderful — but I'll believe it when I see it," says former Stanhope reeve Harry Davis, who was on the committee which raised more than $400,000 for the ill-fated chronic care expansion which was approved back in 1986.

"I thank (the province for the most recent approval) but I'll thank them a heck of a lot more when they put the spade in the ground."

"That's absolutely marvellous that they're providing long-term care in Haliburton County. It's a big step forward... But I'm not sure exactly what it means," says Barbara Dawson, who spearheaded the 1986 campaign. When plans for the chronic care unit were frozen as the province re-evaluated its priorities, Dawson sat on the steering committee which after months of research, recommended that 40 long-term care beds be built in the county. The Haliburton County Planning and Development Committee was established to implement these recommendations after the province agreed to contribute $2.3-million to build up to 30 beds. It was this committee's recommendation that approximately half the beds be added to the Haliburton Hospital as the first phase of the plan.

Bill Valentine, a former Lutterworth councillor, just wishes the expansion had been built before he had to spend the summer in a Toronto hospital recovering from hip surgery.

"I'm really angry the facilities are not up here," he says. Echoing a complaint for many Highlanders who have to leave family and friends to get long-term medical care, he says "I almost went stir crazy."

"It's a great relief," says County Warden George Simmons, stopped on his way to congratulating his daughter at Saturday's Honours and Awards Night at the high school. "Now the sod turning is the next aspiration."

There are still many issues yet to be resolved. The province's press release, issued by MPP Dennis Drainville, says the 15 beds have been allocated to Haliburton County, and not Haliburton Hospital in particular. However, it also says the province is confirming a recommendation by the planning committee. This recommendation was to "fast track" at least 15 beds at the Haliburton Hospital.

"It's just a first step but a necessary first step," says Kate Reed, the committee's local co-ordinator. "You have to start somewhere. We had to get approval before the provincial funding could be accessed."

Several months ago, the province agreed to spend $2.3-million to build up to 30 long-term care beds in the Highlands. When approving the Haliburton expansion, the committee said half of this money and all of the money raised for the previously planned 18-bed chronic care unit would be spent. The county has not decided what to do with its $266,000 contribution, especially as the committee has not yet made a decision about where to allocate the 15 other beds.

But it's not clear how much the Haliburton expansion will cost. Consultants for a feasibility study will be hired in mid-December. The first, six-week phase of the study will concentrate on Haliburton issues, such as whether the original architect's drawings can be used. Funding issues are still being sorted out.

"I think we're well on our way to getting things done and we're following a credible process," Reed says.

MPP encourages debate

by JANET HURLEY

Staff Reporter

Rumors of the closing of Minden Hospital are unfounded and should not be seriously considered by the county's planning and development committee, says the MPP for Victoria-Haliburton.

"One of the great concerns is people who sit outside the committee — senior citizens who are vulnerable within our society — when they hear rumors that the hospital is going to close, those people begin to fear about the future," Dennis Drainville told the Haliburton County Planning and Development Committee last Tuesday.

"I want to make a plea to those at the table and those beyond the table who have an effect on the decision to be careful. What you say in public has an effect on people."

Drainville said encouraging rumors is not appropriate, but what is acceptable is good strong debate so that everyone can hear both sides of the long-term health care issue.

However, Drainville acknowledged the difficulties facing the planning committee as it struggles to outline the future direction of health care in the county.

"I don't envy your task. Sometimes I feel sorry for you on the committee. It is a thankless task," he said.

And one of the main reasons the task has been thankless is because the issue of long-term health care has been a contentious one that has divided the county.

"There has been lots of disagreement and antagonism dealing with this issue. This is not a helpful process. Somehow we must begin to work together and when the decision is made, we have to work together."

The strength of a unified community is important in order to ensure the voice of Haliburton County is heard, said Drainville who lamented the fact that the county is treated like a "branch-plant without control over its future."

"I think it's a branch-plant situation in which decisions are made by other people. It's true of almost any group we have. So our ability to effect change (and obtain our share of funding) is diminished," said Drainville.

Drainville urged the committee to take on the challenge of making Haliburton County's voice strong. And he added that he doesn't care where the long-term beds end up as long as the county receives the best health care system the province can provide. And to that end, he said he would support the final decision made by the planning committee.

The chasm

If politicians want any more proof of the deepening chasm which exists between them and the electorate, they only have to study the muted reaction to the province's approval of 15 long-term care beds to be built at the Haliburton Hospital. After all, this has become the central issue for Highlanders, something they have fought long and hard to achieve. Immense pressure has been put on politicians to come across with the goods. Our present MPP, Dennis Drainville, was given an overwhelming Highlands mandate partly because both he and his leader promised that if elected, the people's wishes for such an essential service would be fulfilled. Shouldn't Drainville now be feted in the streets as people show their joy and thanksgiving?

Leave the parades to the Blue Jays fans, who after years of similarly dashed hopes have finally had their aspirations realized. They've got something concrete to cheer about. Back in Haliburton County, the cheering will come later. The main reaction now seems to be "Oh ya? We'll believe it when we see it."

There is virtually no trust left in the political system. People simply do not believe that what the politicians and bureaucrats say will be what they do. Who can blame them? The hospital project is at the same place it started at six years ago when the previous Liberal government gave approval for 18 chronic care beds and told the people to honour their part of the bargain by raising more than $400,000. Highlanders willingly complied, but that didn't stop the government from freezing the project. Today, people have no reason to believe that last week's approval for 15 beds won't meet the same fate.

The biggest challenge facing politicians is making the people feel like they're part of the process again. Or, better yet, politicians need to get on with the job they were elected for — making the necessary decisions to govern so people can get on with their own lives, trusting that their governments will do what's right. This means thinking of what's best for all people and having the courage to stand up for principles rather than bow down to pressure groups.

Setting up committees so people can talk (and bicker) is only window dressing, a way of appeasing a disgruntled public. What good is talk if there is no resulting action? A case in point is the Haliburton County Planning and Development Committee. Although members have been dedicated and hard-working, one has to ask whether the committee was even necessary. Its job was to implement the recommendations of the steering committee on long-term healthcare, a committee which should have just said "the beds should go here." Many months and thousands of dollars later, the planning committee recommended what the people had said they needed all along. It shouldn't have been difficult. Meanwhile, the planning committee is listening to the same presentations the steering committee listened to. The wheel is being re-invented.

It's probably naive to think the committee has within its power to steer the future direction of healthcare in Haliburton County. Healthcare is a provincial matter. Local representation is necessary to make sure government decisions truly reflect local desires and needs, but the province will essentially do what it wants, when it wants to. Let them get on with the job. The committee's hands are tied for one main reason and one secondary reason: it has no control of the money necessary to implement any recommendations, and it has become a place where a special interest group has been given a greater voice than it deserves. Newspapers can't be blamed for reporting on and therefore flaming the divisiveness which has resulted, but at the same time, news reports distort and magnify any isolated animosity between Minden and Haliburton. Most people read of the rivalry and shake their heads. This isn't the Highlands they know and love.

We need leadership. We need to trust our leaders. We need fewer committees and more action. We need to believe. M.P.

Column takes cheap shot

To the Editor
from our Readers

To the Editor:

In regards to David Carroll's column, Oct. 20, '92.

Pine Point, Kennis Lake, must be pretty boring these days since the docks have been brought in, and Dad's changed the pump, and all your "I'm Gonna Change The World By Caring" buddies have all gone back to the city.

Your column last week was a cheap shot at what has become a way of life in this area.

To begin with, your father's friend, the one who borrowed the .22 for duck hunting: Anyone who would duck hunt with a .22 should not even be near a firearm let alone carry one. It is far too dangerous to other hunters. You see, a .22 is a high velocity rimfire rifle and when the bullet leaves the barrel it is moving incredibly fast! Now water is a funny thing. For it can be as soft as a baby's breath or it can be as hard as pavement. When a projectile traveling as fast as a .22 bullet hits the water, allowing for certain trajectory angles and wind currents it tends to ricochet rather violently, thus endangering others.

The videos Mr. Carroll spoke of are both interesting and informative. They teach people that animals are not to be treated as cute lovable things behind bars at your local zoo! This is real life, and this is what the children should be taught. And if you can't handle real life you have an option, you can buy the video's or not.

I wonder if Mr. Carroll has ever seen a starving deer, because it is real life and Mr. Carroll seems to find that offensive. You see, if we stopped hunting moose or deer, their numbers would begin to grow and soon, without warning, there are thousands of deer and moose. This produces a number of problems: An increased number of highway accidents, which is not only a cruel way for an animal to die but also for people as well; An increase of disease which spreads fast in large populations of animals. Another cruel way for animals to die; An increase in numbers of predatory animals, such as wolves, which although it also is a part of life is one of the cruellest ways for an animal to die.

Starvation is the worst way for an animal to die. A large herd of deer can eat too much, too fast, thus, eating themselves into starvation.

Perhaps we should stop using the word "hunt" and call it population control, or maybe selective harvesting.

You see what we do is a good thing. It may seem uncivilized and savage but sit down and think about what I have written.

As far as I am concerned, Mr. Carroll is just another self proclaimed Eco Warrior trying to pick the scab of a wound which will never heal. This piece is not directed only at him but to all who think like him.

I enjoy reading Mr. Carroll's column, I find it both interesting and amusing, but this time he was way off base.

Jeff Bull, Haliburton.

Minden hospital plea

To the Editor:

I address this letter to the people of Minden and the surrounding communities, as both a concerned physician and citizen, with regards to the threat of the future of Minden Hospital. Many people are mistaken when they feel there is a Minden-Haliburton rivalry and that either Haliburton Hospital or Minden Hospital must close. Haliburton needs Haliburton Hospital every bit as much as Minden needs Minden Hospital. I support Haliburton's endeavours to maintain their community hospital, just as I'm sure Haliburton will support Minden's efforts to keep ours. Minden cannot adequately service Haliburton and visa versa. This is a time that requires solidarity and co-operation rather than division between the community.

There has been a proposal by St. Joseph's Hospital in Peterborough to relocate the emergency services now being offered at Minden Hospital to Hyland Crest Senior Citizen's Home. Supposedly, there would be a new wing built on to BOB POPPLE who was raised in Penetang, travels to Romania next week to oversee construction at that country's first nuclear power plant. "It's a way of helping a country that should have an opportunity to move into the prosperity of the 20th century," he said in an interview from his office at Ontario Hydro to a Penetang newspaper. He was chosen by Hydro to represent the utility at their Cernavoda power station, which is being built about 300 kilometres Southeast of the capital city of Bucharest. Popple, 50, a brother of our own Don Popple of Curry Motors Limited in Haliburton, graduated from Midland-Penetanguishene District High School (now Midland Secondary School) in 1959 and later, in 1963, earned a degree in engineering physics at Queen's University. When completed, the plant will be about the same size as Ontario's Darlington nuclear generating station. It will supply about 30 percent of Romania's electrical needs. The first of its five units alone will provide about $200-million a year in revenues for a country that remains dependent on foreign energy resources, according to hydro. Popple looks forward to his two year posting as an adventure. "We'll be moving into a formerly Eastern Bloc country." The country has been essentially stalled for 50 years, economically. Providing them with energy is perhaps a way to get their economy started and to give them a base for industrialization. His mother Agnes still lives in Penetang, on Church Street.

Fans of Ugly Rumour will be disappointed to hear the news that the musical group are calling it quits and will be making their final appearance at the 2nd Annual Halloween Dance to be held this Friday evening, October 30 at the Royal Canadian Legion in Haliburton. Proceeds to benefit Haliburton County Search and Rescue Support Team.

Just a reminder here that the 4th annual Used Book Sale is now on at the Bank of Montreal in Haliburton. It will run from October 26 to October 30th. Proceeds will go to charity.

We have just been informed that a total of 210 kids were finger printed at the Shout No Day held at Curry Motors Limited recently. Haliburton Police Support Association volunteered their time to help at this big event.

It seems that our own Bernie Nicholls from West Guilford who plays hockey for the Edmonton Oilers in the N.H.L. is back in the news. A sports snapshot from a recent edition of the Toronto Star has this to report. NHL president Gil Stein rendered his first judgments as league disciplinarian recently, suspending Edmonton's Bernie Nicholls and Montreal's Mike Keane without pay for seven and four days, respectively, after separate pre-season incidents. Nicholls, who was also fined $50, will lose $10,143 in pay because of the suspension, which is the result of his two-handed, overhead swing of his stick at Boston's Darren Banks during an exhibition game on September 28. Nicholls reacted angrily to the fine. "Obviously I'm the first guy penalized under this new policy," Nicholls told Jim Matheson of the Edmonton Journal. "They want to make some sort of standard so he (Stein) looks like a hero. Well, he's a big hero... I can't understand how I can be fined $10,000 for hitting a guy on the arm, it's ridiculous," said Nicholls. "It's a big joke. How can a guy (Stein) who's never played the game be making decisions like this? If I had wanted to hurt him, I would have hit him on the neck or where there is no padding. This is a disgrace. A few years ago Dave Brown didn't get fined as much as I did for almost decapitating a guy (Ulf Samuelsson with his stick)". The players will not miss any games because of the suspensions, since they are to be served on non-travel and non-playing days.

A few local notes... Jean Morgan, Past President of Area Board and Oshawa Aglow was the guest speaker when Haliburton Women's Aglow met at the J.D. Hodgson Elementary School on Monday night, October 26... No NHL player up to two weeks ago had taken advantage of the league's new optional helmet rule. Edmonton's Bernie Nicholls is among a number who have apparently signed the required waiver forms which would permit them to take it off at any time... To help promote and celebrate Snowfest, the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association has produced slick snowfest sweatshirts which will be on sale at local Haliburton businesses.

Not another sticky subject!

ACCORDING TO my Murphy's Law calendar today, "There are only two kinds of adhesive tape: the one that won't stay on... and the one that won't come off."

Actually, during a trip to the hospital last summer, I have discovered an amazing version that does stay on pretty well, but comes off without pulling out all the hair when it has to go. We now use 3M Micropore all the time - on people.

It is interesting that 3M, which started out making adhesive to stick the sand on sandpaper, is now making adhesive tape for use in hospitals - where one is more likely to expect Johnson & Johnson to be the supplier. (They definitely have the contract for their Band-aids in there).

When you think of the kind of tape that doesn't come off, of course the first thing that comes to mind is duct tape. That's the wide, gray stuff that men use to fix almost anything. Probably some women, too, if they've found out about it.

It's sort of an all-purpose handyman-mechanic item, I suppose that you might see Tim Allen using on his "Home Improvement" television show. If you're more of a "call for help" than a do-it-yourself type, you might not be as familiar with it.

I was in the former category back in my early twenties when I was introduced to this particular product. I bought a used 1946 Austin A-40 in traditional gray in the summer of 1955. One of the things that had to be explained to me was what was holding on (and actually creating a good portion of) the left front fender.

In spite of the fact that it was designed to hold furred ducts together - or so I was told - it did a good job on the fender. Unfortunately, the real problem with this car was in the steering, and no sticky tape was going to solve the problem - but that's another story).

Actually, duct tape was invented by Johnson & Johnson, and for all I know they make it at their big plant down near Peterborough. At any rate, it was created in 1930 at their East Windsor, New Jersey, plant - as a white waterproof cloth tape called Dryback for use in hospitals.

Its versatility was discovered in World War II, when it was used to hold ammunition boxes together, but it didn't take on its distinctive gray color until after the war, when air conditioning became a big deal, and the sealing of ducts became important.

(I am indebted to "Roadside America - A travel guide to the places the Chamber of Commerce won't tell you about," for information on this particular item. They actually list where you can go to see it made!)

Among the ingenious uses found for duct tape over the years:

- Beauty contestants have used it to give their breasts just the right lift.

- Rock music roadies - and broadcast newsmen everywhere - use it to hold spider's nests of microphones and speaker wires together.

- Police officers have been known to use it to bind prisoners, particularly when there were more rioters or looters than there were handcuffs - and kidnappers use it to tie up their victims and keep them quiet. Ouch.

- It works as a roach trap, a luggage label, and as a sailor's friend. The captain of the America's Cup racing yacht used it to tie down rigging and lines, and even to eliminate friction on the hull.

- In the summer of 1976, Harold Brown, of Rockville, Maryland, used it to close a two-inch gash in his left leg, when a wedge flew out of a log that he was splitting.

It's a handy product, one I wouldn't want to be without at home or on the road, and I highly recommend it for those occasions where parts of your house, or car - or life - start to come apart at the seams.

But I haven't been able to confirm that their original slogan was "take it and stick it..."

The bats of Toronto North

DAVID CARROLL

PINE POINT, KENNISIS LAKE: It's been a distracting week, thanks to the blue Jays.

They've had more late-inning comebacks than Pierre Trudeau, which has made it all the more difficult for me to get my writing done. Every night I camp myself in front of the TV, hang on every pitch, and yank precious hairs out of my head. Worst of all, my friend Christopher and I forfeited our bonding weekend in favour of waiting in line for World Series tickets. It was a stupid thing to do. All the tickets had been sold to the scalpers, who were demanding upward of $800 a pair.

After Saturday's humiliating defeat I resolved to forget the Jays completely and get down to work. First thing Monday I went to the library to do some research for a column I'd been meaning to write. The column was about a plucky little bat who moved into the storage room beneath our cottage. Dad discovered him back in September, and immediately vowed to evict the critter.

Mom argued that the bat was doing no harm. "Blacky just needs a warm place to hibernate," she said.

"Uh-oh," said Andy. "The bat's got a name." Dad said he didn't think that bats hibernated. Nobody was able to confirm or deny this. The next day I walked into the little room and caught Blacky flapping about in Dad's box of power tools. He had a guilty look on his mousy face.

"I don't think Blacky is planning to hibernate," I told Dad. I did not mention that I had seen the varmint frolicking with his Black and Deckers. "His droppings are starting to smell," said Andy. "That's it," Dad snapped. "He's outta there."

That was back in September, and although Blacky still lives in the little room beneath our cottage, I hadn't had any time to write about him. Vowing to write about his charming episode, I went to my local library to find out if bats hibernated.

I should mention that a freelance writer's most important friend is his librarian. In my experience, nobody knows more about the state of the universe than those little old ladies behind the oak desk.

"Bats?" the librarian repeated. "What do you want to know about bats?"

I told her I wanted to know if they hibernated. This answer didn't seem to please her, so I explained that I was writing an article for a small-town newspaper.

"Which one?" she demanded. "The Haliburton Echo," I replied. She squinted. "You're not the city slicker, are you?"

It turned out she owns a cottage on Lake

Kushog. "Have I got a bat story for you!" she cried.

And she did.

Years ago, soon after buying their cottage, the librarian's husband ordered a fireplace. "Rod drove all the way to Peterborough to pick it up," she explained. "While he was waiting in the bus terminal he noticed a mouse with a broken leg, dragging itself across the floor. Now, Rod is an animal-lover, and since there were people walking this way and that, he rushed over to help the mouse out of the way, so that it wouldn't get squashed. But as he did this, the mouse spread its leathery wings and took to the air. It wasn't a mouse at all. It was a bat. Rod brought the fireplace north and forgot all about the incident, but ever since then we've had bats nesting in our chimney."

The librarian laughed: "They must know what a softy Rod is. They know he wouldn't hurt them. That's OK, bats are good to have around. They eat 5,000 mosquitoes a day, you know."

This story was far more interesting than any research I could have done. That's why I always try to make friends with librarians. They can save you a lot of work.

I asked her name. "Ann Stewart," she said. "Then your husband is..."

"That's right," she said, "Rod Stewart. We used to have a sign at the road, but cars kept stopping for autographs, so we had to take it down."

I asked her if she was a year-round subscriber to the Echo. She said yes. I asked her what she does with the paper bag the Echo arrives in, and she replied that she cuts them up and uses them to wrap Christmas presents. I told her I thought that was an inventive idea.

"Thank you," she said. "Put it in your column."

I promised and started home to write up the column. Finally, I thought, I'm going to get some writing done!

I was passing the checkout desk when Ann called me back. "Hey!" she said. "How 'bout them Jays?"

DOWN OUR ROAD
SHARON LYNCH

IT HAD NOT BEEN one of his better days. The morning had greeted Bert with a flat tire and the day had gone downhill from there. A frustrating time at the office had culminated in the banking machine swallowing his card and refusing to give it back. Swearing under his breath at life in general and machines in particular, Bert had almost knocked over a woman standing near the outer bank door. He began to mumble an apology, then took another look at her.

He recognized her as one of a group of people of various ages often seen walking aimlessly down Main Street or lounging about on park benches. Instead of apologizing, Bert pushed past her, headed for his car. "Damn lazy bums," he muttered to himself as he fumbled for his keys. A parking ticket blocked his vision when he sat down to turn on the ignition. What a day.

All the way home he stewed about the woman outside the bank and the others of her like he had so often watched with indignation when he was in town. What kind of a system do we have in this country anyhow, he wondered to himself, when perfectly fit and able people can live off the work of others? By the time he reached home, he had managed to work up a real anger. All the bad things that had happened to him that day only made his mood darker as he went over, point by point, the many ways he felt used, and abused.

It wasn't until he arrived home and saw the notice pinned to his kitchen bulletin board that he remembered the meeting in town that night. He had to turn around and drive all the way back. Bert was not a happy fellow when he arrived at the gathering. He sat patiently through the first half, trying to focus his attention on the business at hand rather than his own inner churnings. If he had eaten supper he knew he would have felt better.

When they broke for coffee and muffins, Bert homed in on the refreshment table like a burr to a dog's tail. He had just finished piling his plate with two cherry muffins and five tabs of butter when he heard a familiar voice call his name. Turning, he saw his old friend Maggie, someone he had not talked to in nearly two years. It never ceased to amaze Bert how even in a very small town, busy people can lose touch with each other.

The two of them found chairs off to the side and sat down to munch, slip and try to catch up in ten minutes. Bert hadn't realized that Maggie had made a career change. He was less than enthusiastic with her choice. "So you've become one of those social workers, have you Maggie? Tell me something. When are we going to get those people off the taxpayer's back and out earning their keep?"

He knew these were strong words, but it had been a bad day and he wanted to hear what his old friend had to say. Being Maggie, she did not lose her cool and that was as he had expected. In fact, instead of addressing his question directly she said she wanted to tell him a little story. Holding up her hand to interrupt Bert's groan, she said it would not take long.

Then, to his total horror, Maggie told Bert about one of her "clients", as she called them, that she visited that very morning. As a child, the woman had been sexually and physically abused by both her parents, as had her younger siblings, being the eldest, she had tried fighting back, which resulted in numerous broken bones over the years. The situations to which she had been exposed as a child made Bert nauseous to hear, but until the girl was finally able to escape, she had lived like a trapped and tortured animal.

The body's broken bones healed. The person inside never did. Maggie told Bert that eventually the woman married but it was never a real marriage in the full sense of the world. She had been under the treatment of specialists for years and Maggie guessed she probably always would be. She had tried working but little things set her off; the look on a customer's face, the way a child sat in a chair, something on the menu. In the end, her work history was so poor that employers were reluctant to give her a try.

But she had managed to stay out of institutions and with help, successfully maneuvered her way through life on a day to day basis. In the long run, Maggie pointed out to Bert, that was the cheapest solution from a tax payer's point of view.

Bert was shocked. When Maggie added that this story was not an isolated or unusual one, he could only shake his head in disbelief. Next to some lives, his flat tire, parking ticket and fight with the banking machine did not seem nearly so serious now.

Then he thought of the woman he had nearly bumped into outside the bank. Was she the one in Maggie's story? Bert realized he would never know. On the surface, she had looked fine. But then, he now knew more about the scars and illnesses that remained forever invisible.

Redmen go undefeated into finals

Seniors beat Falcons 32-0

The HHSS Redmen football teams capped their most successful season ever on Friday as they captured the Kawartha West championship without a playoff. Both teams went undefeated in six games, winning by big margins over the Fenelon Falls Falcons at home to put the crowning touch on an extraordinary season.

The Senior Redmen dominated the visiting Falcons 32-0 in front of a crowd that included coaches from Peterborough schools who were scouting the Redmen offence and videotaping the action, the first time the usually powerful Peterborough schools have taken the Redmen so seriously. And well they should. For the first time in the history of football at HHSS, not a single touchdown was scored against the seniors. In all, the seniors scored 194 points, and allowed just three. The juniors did almost as well, racking up 185 points while allowing their opponents a mere eight points in six games.

As Kawartha West champions, the senior Redmen will play host to either Kenner Collegiate or Crestwood next Tuesday, November 3. The Juniors will travel to Peterborough for the Kawartha title game on Thursday, November 5. Haliburton's opponent will be determined this Saturday when the top Peterborough teams square off for the title of city champions.

As it has all season, the Senior Redmen's defense played outstandingly on Friday, shutting the Falcons out completely with five recovered fumbles, four interceptions and six pass knockdowns. Offensively, Jay Hughes was unflappable, executing superbly in long downfield marches that produced four touchdowns.

For the first time in the history of the Kawartha West championship, one highschool has produced the winning team in both the junior and senior divisions. On Friday afternoon in Haliburton, the Senior Redmen, above, and Junior Redmen, below, celebrate their hard-fought victories.

Soccer teams squeezed out of post-season play

by JANET HURLEY
Staff Reporter

Despite a season plagued by illness and injury, the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School's junior soccer team went out with a bang, but for the senior Redmen, the end was far more disappointing.

The senior Redmen, who were depending on the game to clinch a playoff spot, were shut out of division playoffs after losing 1-0 to Fenelon Falls Secondary School last Tuesday. The junior Redmen, with no hope of making the playoffs, were still able to walk away from their final regular season game with a blow-out victory of 6-0.

The junior game was firmly dominated by the Redmen who went into the game expecting a win over the younger, smaller team from Fenelon Falls.

The six goals were split evenly between the two halves, with Andrew Wilbee and Jay Corby scoring two each, and Josh Jarvis and Jamie Thivierge both scoring one goal. The shutout was shared by goalie Scott Dedman and Curtis Fielding who came into replace Dedman towards the end of the game.

"It was encouraging for us to see that the training was all worthwhile," said Coach Mark Flatman. "At the end, they were definitely strong and cohesive. They played a good passing game and people played their positions well."

Flatman said he was pleased with the season and he believes that if some of his starters hadn't sat out games because of injury and illness, the team could have made to the playoffs. One of those starters, Nathan Gibbons, played against Fenelon Falls and had an excellent game.

"It was encouraging for us to see that the training was all worthwhile"

Mark Flatman

As for next year, Flatman said the Redmen's prospects look good as the team will not be losing a large number of players like it did the year before.

The senior team will be in the same boat. Except for Darren Johnston, all starters will be back next year. And perhaps that will help them secure the playoff spot they lost at last week's game.

Coach Walter Tose blames the miserable weather in part for the 1-0 loss against Fenelon Falls. The field was greasy and it was difficult to get a handle on the ball, but Tose also admits the team just didn't capitalize on opportunities.

"We pushed to the end. We had chances, but we weren't able to capitalize on those chances," he said.

The one and only goal from Fenelon Falls came in the first half off a penalty kick.

Considering the inclement conditions, goalie Bruce Milne was still able to get a foot on the ball. But it bounced up to the top of the bar and into the net despite Milne's efforts.

"Our guys kept coming back though," said Tose who added that when the Redmen's Nico Haedicke got a penalty kick in the Fenelon zone, his spirits were lifted.

But a goal was not to be as Haedicke shot the ball straight to the goalie instead of up into the corners.

The game ended with the loss to the Redmen which put them into third place in the division and out of the playoffs.

"We thought, maybe this isn't the year for us," said Tose.

"Considering it's essentially a brand new team this year, they had a fair season...I'm not at all disappointed."

Coach optimistic about playoff

Peter VanLeewen put the Redmen on the scoreboard in the first quarter with some strong running, and Jamie Keefer was accurate as usual on the convert attempt.

In the second quarter the local boys took right over, controlling the field and forcing the Falcons to give up two safety touches. Hughes kept the offense rolling downfield with a series of short ground gains that paid off with six more points on a 10 yard run by Andy Bacon. Keefer's convert made the score 18-0 at the half.

Neither team scored in the third quarter, as the Redmen defense continued to dominate with effective pass coverage and strong tackling that produced turnovers.

In the fourth quarter, Bacon drove in for his second TD of the game, and Craig Harding also powered in for six points. Keefer was good on both converts for a final score of 32-0.

Can the Senior Redmen do what they've never done before and beat Peterborough's best for the Kawartha District title?

"We're optimistic, because we have a good team, but we're also realistic," says coach Gary Brohman. The Peterborough opposition will be bigger and almost certainly better than the teams the Redmen faced all season in the Kawartha West league. But whether they can stop the Redmen offense and overpower the defense won't be known until next Tuesday, when the local boys get their chance to add the crowning touch to a memorable season.

The Juniors will also be in tough against the Peterborough league winners. The key to the game will be the opposition's ability to stop the unstoppable running of Peter Brohman, who was once again superb on Friday, racking up 215 yards on 26 carries, and scoring all three Redmen TD's in a 21-0 victory. No team has been able to successfully key on Brohman this season, who has been aided in breaking loose by fullback Tim Keefer's blocking. That one-two punch could deliver the knockout that will give the Juniors the Kawartha District title.

Friday's game was a walkover for the Junior Redmen. Brohman scored TD's in the first, second and fourth quarter, and Ryan Goodall added the extra points. Defensively, Haliburton recovered seven Falcons fumbles and snagged two interceptions.

Sam Little was once again at the top of his game at quarterback. He has improved with every outing, and has played a key role in the team's season-long unbeaten streak.

Both teams will be working out to keep sharp in anticipation of the championship games.

Field hockey games end in scoreless ties

by DAUREENA WARBURTON
HHSS Student

After having a week off, the girls H.H.S.S. field hockey team is back in action and burning up the fields. Haliburton came up with two scoreless ties while visiting Lakefield College in league play on Thursday, October 22.

In the first game, Haliburton played against Lakefield. During the first half Haliburton had the disadvantage of having to play in wet grass and mud. Haliburton overcame this and was able to play a strong defensive game.

At the end of the first half their was he score. Haliburton went back out onto the field with the determination that they would come up ahead of Lakefield. Haliburton fought hard defensively and offensively but they couldn't get past Lakefield's defense. The game was scoreless.

Haliburton had a 20 minute break to recover from the Lakefield game before facing their rival team, Thomas A. Stewart. Haliburton was leery about their condition and how they would play against the Peterborough team. Haliburton knew that they would have to play to their best ability. And they did. They held Thomas A. Stewart off and Thomas A. Stewart was able to hold Haliburton back.

Haliburton's defense and offense were constantly playing to their best. Haliburton chalked up another scoreless tie.

There was excellent playing by Christine Hardy, Jen Bradford, Stacey Vick, Anna Tomlinson.

Bantams blow away Danish competition

An international meeting of two minor hockey teams ended with Haliburton dominating the play and capturing a 6-3 victory.

On Tuesday, October 20th, the Ontario Minor Hockey Association's Bantam Huskies played host to a visiting team from Copenhagen, Denmark. This team spent just over a week in Canada playing exhibition games and taking in some of the sights of southern and central Ontario.

The evening began with the introduction of the players and coaches of both teams, and the singing of both the Danish and Canadian national anthems. The players and coaches from Denmark each received a copy of Chris Bishop's fine book of photographs of our area. The Danish team presented the Haliburton Minor Hockey Association with a lovely plate from Copenhagen and a pennant. Dysart et al Reeve Chris Hodgson dropped the puck for the ceremonial face off.

The game itself proved to be entertaining and fast-paced, living up to our expectations of international competition. Despite taking a number of penalties in the first two periods, the home team managed to stay close and late in the second period, scored to take a 3-2 lead. Scoring for Haliburton were Curtis Bain and Tim Stouffer unassisted and Rene Gagnon on a fine set up from team captain Tim Keefer.

In the third period, playing mostly at full strength, Haliburton dominated the play. Derek Glendinning scored two goals and Tim Keefer shot in one to the make the final score 6-3 in favour of Haliburton.

The evening concluded with a reception in the community centre where the hungry players made short work of several pizzas.

The Danish team had been undefeated in the previous four games and had one more game to

Tyke goalie stops 29 shots for win

On Sunday, the Haliburton Jasco Tykes travelled to Little Britain for their season opener. The Little Britain squad had previously trounced Fenelon Falls 12-0 and Bobcaygeon 6-0. The Haliburton coaching staff knew this was the team to beat.

Right from the opening drop the Tykes from the south took control, pounding the Haliburton net. But Andy Dawson stood stellar between the pipes.

The Haliburton gang found their bearings and turned the game into an end-to-end rock 'em, sock 'em battle. With 50 seconds to go in the first, the Little Britain crowd cheered as their boys finally beat the Haliburton goalie.

The second period was a carbon copy of the first with Little Britain scoring a late goal to go up 2-0.

With six minutes remaining in the game, Haliburton's Jason Chambers and Norman Smith set up Jamie Salk who beat the Little Britain goalie with a hard wrist shot. But Little Britain came storming back with a pair to go 4-1.

With less than a minute left,

Haliburton's Andre Nichol tipped a breakaway pass to Shawn MacInnes who made no mistake deeking the Little Britain goalie right out of C.C.M's. But that's the way it would end. All the Jasco Tykes fought a hard battle but the M.V.P went to goalie Andy Dawson who stopped 29 shots to keep his team in the game.

Come on out and support the boys this Saturday at noon in their game against Bobcaygeon.

First shutout comes against Cannington

Haliburton's OMHA Novice Huskies defeated Cannington 11-0 in exhibition on Saturday, with goalie Ryan Chalmers achieving his first shutout of the season.

Adam Henry, Jeff Wilson, Chris Petrov and Jamie L... each scored twice. With angles by Warren Cooper, Scott Curry and Ryan Wood. Ryan

People urged to be cautious about suspect consumer product survey

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

People are urged to be cautious about filling out a survey which may simply be a way of telling thieves what they should take and when.

The survey starts out simply enough with questions about consumer products — do you ever use lip balm or what kind of throat lozenges do you buy. But towards the end it asks whether the person owns any jewellery, how often vacations are taken, and the types and values of savings.

It was these more personal questions which prompted one woman to take the survey to the police. She doesn't want her name to be used because "I don't want to advertise the fact I was so gullible to fill it out."

Doreen Hawman of the Haliburton County Information Centre echoes the call for caution. "My concern is there are seniors who would be drawn into this and fill out the form feeling they're doing their duty. By the time you get to the back you're not thinking about it and you're just answering the questions..."

"In rural areas people are very friendly and wouldn't think people are a threat."

It started last week when two women knocked on the local resident's door and after explaining that they were part of a consumer study, were invited inside the house. They stayed for about half an hour, giving the woman a free canvas bag, the survey and a card which could be entered in a draw for a television or VCR. The name on the thick survey says "Thompson Lightstone and Compnay Ltd." but there is no address or identifying information. There's a paste-on label which identifies the house's location.

"Knowledge of the products you use, and those of other Canadians, helps Canadian business to produce what you want and need," the survey says. "It is important to answer ALL questions."

While there, both women asked to use the washroom, which enabled them to go through the house, perhaps to see what the woman owned. Before they left, they said they would return to pick up the survey. If the woman was out, she was asked to leave the survey in a bag on the doorknob. The card for the draw was also to be included, but as Mrs. Hawman of the Information Centre notes, the card does not indicate when or where the draw will be made. There is also no licence number.

The local woman had filled out consumer questionnaires before, and did not hesitate to comply with this one. However, when she got to questions like how many nights are you away from home, "I didn't like that." Then she was asked about the quantity and value of jewellery she owned, and whether she had bought a television in the past few years.

She began lying, and then her uneasiness led her to believe the questionnaire was designed to let thieves know what was worth stealing in her home. The questionnaire also let them know whether she was home often enough to risk being caught. When the women return for the survey, she will not give it to them.

Sgt. Doug Bernardi of the Minden OPP says if someone comes to your door, you have the legal right not to answer any questions (unless it's someone from Elections Canada concerning enumeration). "It's your property and you're not under any obligation to say anything." If the person continues to bother you, you can tell them to leave. If they don't, they are trespassing and can be charged.

Also, people should be aware of strangers who fail to identify themselves. "You should request proper identification," he says. The two women with the survey did not have any. If you don't want them returning to your house, you can say you'll mail the survey in. Be careful if there is no mailing address.

As a matter of caution, Sgt. Bernardi says it is against the law for someone to ask you for your social insurance number.

Mrs. Hawman says if you feel uncomfortable about the questions you are asked or the information required, such as credit card numbers, "contact your OPP immediately."

A WARNING TO SENIORS: Doreen Hawman of the Haliburton County Information Service says people should think twice about filling out survey.

site for Kenney's were upset that the coffee had been absconded. The coffee was below grade supply that had accumulated over the years.

Cameron and Ivan Ingram inspected the Scotch Line site the next day and found that the coffee was still on the bank. Cameron said the coffee packages were easily accessible and anyone could have taken some. The landfill attendant, Betty Milburn, was not aware that someone had taken any of the refuse.

Cameron said he contacted the people involved and the Ministry of Environment and the coffee caper has officially been resolved.

"Too bad," said one of the councillors on reflection of the incident, "we don't have a composter!"

Country sounds in Carnarvon?

Some good old country music may be heading for Haliburton County.

John Mattsson, a former night club owner, is tentatively planning to open a country music bar at the former site of N.J.'s on Highway 35 south of Carnarvon. And he's one step closer after council agreed to his application for a licensed outdoor patio.

Mattsson said he may not be able to build Mattsson's Country Club, but if he does, he wants to have the approved liquor licenses.

Council was concerned about the neighbours in the area who might be disturbed by an outdoor patio. However, Mattsson told council that the neighbours are aware of his intentions and he promised the patio would only be open until 11 p.m.

pensate for all of the down-loaded services. She also said she was concerned that smaller municipalities may not be able to deal with disentanglement.

"For urban centres, this may not be as devastating as it will be for small rural municipalities with a limited tax base."

McDuff urged her colleagues to look carefully at restructuring options such as reducing the number of municipalities, and to consider the good of the county as a whole before the resolution comes up at the next council meeting.

Attendance request

County Council supported a resolution put forth by Glamorgan to invite the Honourable Ruth Grier to a public forum on environmental and waste management issues in rural municipalities.

Life's an open door for Olympian

Van Kiekebelt constantly finds new opportunities

by JANET HURLEY
Staff Reporter

The years have been extremely good to Canadian Olympic pentathlete Deborah Van Kiekebelt.

At 38, she is still incredibly trim and fit. But more importantly, the years have provided her with a perspective on life that can uplift and inspire even the most downtrodden of souls.

Her story is one of reaching the highs and lows in both an athletic and broadcasting career. And it is only now, almost 20 years after her last international competition, that she can sit back and enjoy what she has gone through.

"The last 10 years of my life have been the happiest and most productive because I've finally realized my potential," said Van Kiekebelt who is now the owner of her own communications company D.V.K. Enterprises.

Van Kiekebelt shared her life experiences with participants in the PineStone's Spa Retreat this past weekend. Having spent Saturday afternoon offering tips on new trends in exercise and actually leading an exercise class, Van Kiekebelt topped off her visit with an evening "pop" talk.

Knowing full-well she was competing with the final game of the World Series, Van Kiekebelt kept her remarks brief. But she was still able to drive home a positive and well-received message.

"Doors open and close for us and it is the people who are not afraid to walk through those doors and take a chance that really become successful."

Plenty of doors opened for Van Kiekebelt during her career, and plenty of them slammed shut in her face.

At 12 years old, she made the national Olympic Track and Field Team and was on Alberta's diving and golf teams.

"There wasn't anything I couldn't do. But if you asked me if I could do those things, I'd say no. I'd say it was a bad year. I didn't have the confidence in myself," said Van Kiekebelt who added that back then she was afraid to lose because she felt she was letting people down.

"I realize now how important it is to lose. You can't be a winner or realize your potential unless you learn how to lose."

At 15 years of age, Van Kiekebelt went to the Pan American Games in Colombia. It was an eye-opening experience for her. Besides being exposed to a different and somewhat violent culture, she also won the gold medal.

"It was a tremendous experience to stand on the podium and see the flag raised right side up," she said in joking reference to the upside-down Canadian flag fiasco of the World Series.

Despite her accomplishments, her tough Russian coach told her she should be embarrassed by her performance. Her confidence fell. But she went to Yugoslavia where she over-trained for the

Deborah Van Kiekebelt is still a winner

Olympic Games in Munich, Germany.

Then at the 1972 Olympic Games, tragedy struck. Palestinians took Israeli athletes hostage and later killed them, and the entire Olympic village became an armed camp.

"It was the saddest experience in the world because we were all young kids pursuing a dream and it all turned into a political nightmare," said Van Kiekebelt.

"It's a part of history that makes you think that life should be lived to the fullest."

After the 1972 Games, Van Kiekebelt intended to participate in Montreal's Olympic Games, but a bout with mononucleosis put her out of competition. A door closed.

And then another one opened.

Van Kiekebelt, who graduated from Ryerson's journalism program, got into broadcasting. In 1977, at a television station in Sudbury she became Canada's first woman sportscaster.

Despite mostly male criticisms against her, she progressed through CITY-TV and was eventually picked up by NBC to co-host the 1980 Olympic Games with jocks A.J. Simpson and Bruce Jenner.

One of her first preparatory interviews was with boxer

Mohammad Ali. She asked him what he thought about the threat by United States President Jimmy Carter to boycott the Olympic Games in Moscow. Ali, who Van Kiekebelt claims was taking a lot of uppers and downers at the time, was incoherent.

"I thought, this guy is ruining my career!"

But the boycott went on and Van Kiekebelt was sent home to Toronto where she worked as a fitness director at a women's private club. She eventually returned to broadcasting with CITY-TV for three years before she left to start her own company.

D.V.K. Enterprises does special television programs on health and motivational issues as well as on parenting and reading. In addition to her television and radio work, Van Kiekebelt is also currently writing a book about teaching children to appreciate themselves.

As a mother of three, Van Kiekebelt says raising her children is her most important job right now. She does it with her husband to whom she credits a lot of her positive self-confidence.

"One of the key points in the way I began to feel about myself was meeting my husband. He was never competitive with me and always supportive. It is important that we have someone to support us. We all need someone to be our cheering section."

Reflecting back on her career and life, Van Kiekebelt added that if people should take anything away from her experiences, she hoped it would be the message that everyone should redefine their goals and direction when a door closes, because in time, another one will open.

"What this whole story of my life brings us back to is the importance of weekends like these," she said. "When you get away and reassess yourself, you open your eyes to see what you didn't know was there."

Team guaranteed a playoff position

Janina Oepke, Lindsay Francis, Stacey Bunn, Kim Smith, Tobi Rowden, and Michelle Simms. When some of the players needed a rest from the hard working games Meaghan Obee, Carol Mowat, Dionna Warburton, and Jess Wallace were there to replace the winded players. In goal was Bobbi Griffin who earned both shut outs. Griffin hasn't allowed any goals to be scored on her in the league games.

With the two ties acquired on Thursday, Haliburton is guaranteed position in the playoffs.

Today the team will be in Peterborough competing in Kawartha finals. The team will have a lot of work to do but they are optimistic of how they are going to work as a team. The best of luck to the team.

Couple's Christmas open-house to benefit needy

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas at Mary and Ron Campbell's house on Lake Kashagawigamog.

For the second year in a row, they are getting ready to share the Yuletide spirit with other Highlanders. But it isn't easy opening up your fancifully-decorated home to people when you're only here on weekends.

"I love Christmas. It's the one time of year I get excited," says Mrs. Campbell, who thinks if she starts now she'll be ready for the December 5 and 6 open house.

There's a lot of work ahead of her. Last year, 100 people came to large glass and stone house which the Campbells had recently purchased from the PineStone. This year, by opening the Saturday as well, she hopes to attract twice as many people, and therefore be able to donate twice as much money to the 4Cs Christmas food drive. With a $5 charge per person, and much of the food being donated, the goal is to add $1,000 to the local charity's coffers.

"By donating the money it's making Christmas special for some children," says Mrs. Campbell, who grew up on a farm during the Depression, and can well remember the excitement of unwrapping gifts. No matter how much the family did without for 364 days of the year, Christmas was always special, especially Christmas dinner. "It was the one time of year we thought we had the things we wanted and needed."

During what some people are referring to as a little depression, those Christmas memories may be fleeting for some young children in the county. Believing that all children have the right to be touched by the holiday magic, the 4Cs makes a special effort to make sure that every family has a turkey with all the fixings and there are a few toys under the tree. To do this, it needs the community's help.

Mrs. Campbell got the idea for the fund-raising open house from similar projects in the Dundas and Hamilton area, where the Campbells live and work. In Dundas, people buy a ticket which gives them access to several beautifully decorated houses. So far, Mrs. Campbell hasn't found anyone else willing to join her.

But she has received lots of support. The 4Cs is proposing that each church donate 10 dozen cookies for the open house. Hot cider and traditional holiday goodies will also be provided, so there's no way visitors will go hungry.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Campbell is unpacking dozens of boxes of holiday decorations. This year the theme will be Victorian and she is full of ideas of how to turn back the clock, at this one corner of Lake Kashagawigamog at least.

"When people come I hope they do what they did last year - linger on with the friends they meet here and stay a while," says the generous hostess.

The Campbells' house will be open from 1 to 5 p.m. on both the Saturday and Sunday of the first weekend in December. Tickets will be available at the festooned front door.

DECK THE HALLS: Although it may seem early to most people, Mary Campbell needs an early start to her Christmas decorating. For the second year in a row, she is opening her Lake Kashagawigamog home to help raise money for the 4Cs' Christmas food drive.

Changes to Algonquin Park rules will affect hunters in McCrae area

As many hunters know there have been many changes to administration at Algonquin Park. The following is a reminder to those resource users of Clyde, Bruton and Eyre Townships (McCrae Addition).

1. All-terrain vehicles (A.T.V.'s) are not allowed for any type of recreational use. The McCrae Addition is excluded from this until it is added to Algonquin Park.

2. The McCrae Addition will be added to Algonquin Park early in 1993. When this occurs all the waters will automatically be included as part of Division #13 (see Ontario Fishery Regulation for details). At that time, the use of A.T.V.'s, snow machines, and outboard motors will also be restricted.

3. Effective immediately, no hunting is allowed in any Nature Reserve Zone. These zones will be posted with standard "no hunting" (trespass-type) signs. These areas are set aside to protect significant natural life-science features and as a result no resource extraction is to occur.

4. In 1993, any vehicle in this area will require a valid vehicle permit to be displayed at all times on the dash.

5. Overnight camping is only permitted on designated campsites (with appropriate licences). All other uses in these areas are for day-use only. For 1992, the McCrae Addition is to be treated as regular Crown land (no licences required).

If you would like to have your name and address included on our mailing list to receive any new information or policy or regulation changes for these areas, please contact the Algonquin Park District Office.

If you have any further questions or concerns please contact the Park Superintendent, Algonquin Provincial Park, Box 219, Whitney, Ontario K0J 2M0 (613) 637-2780.

Novices win big

Committee attacked

move intended to benefit only the municipality of Dysart et al.

"In their press release, the Committee charged themselves with the task of implementing the recommendations of the Steering Committee. Instead, they have begun a political agenda which bears little or no resemblance to their allotted task," he says.

Kernohan, who expresses his hesitation to write the letter because "if the 'Haliburton Village Echo' were to get hold of it, they would be of the opinion that this is simply another whining citizen from Minden," says the committee members are waging a battle to expand the Haliburton Hospital with money intended for long-term care beds.

Referring to newspaper reports which state that the Minden Hospital should not be attached to Hyland Crest due to the stress that would be created on the residents of the home, Kernohan questions why the committee would recommend long-term beds be placed at Haliburton Hospital, unless the agenda was to expand the hospital.

He claims this move would penalize taxpayers by requiring everyone to pay for the additional services required by long term care that are not currently offered by hospitals such as a chapel, recreational areas and therapy rooms.

And for that reason, Kernohan suggests that the committee should in fact be considering the county's already existing long-term care facilities at Hyland Crest and Extencicare as sites for the beds.

"It seems only logical that these two facilities should be looked at first as the additional amenities already exist and only an additional wing of rooms would have to be added," he says in the letter.

"The only reasons I can think of that this is not the direction being taken are (1) the Planning and Development Committee feels they can dupe the Ministry of Health into classifying these beds as acute care once they are attached to the Haliburton Hospital, or alternatively (2) the Planning and Development Committee is attempting to change the role of the Haliburton Hospital into a long-term care facility."

At last Tuesday's committee meeting, Kernohan's letter incited discussion. Dysart et al Reeve and committee member Chris Hodgson said the committee should respond.

"The letter calls into question the legitimacy of the committee," said Hodgson, adding that he joined the committee with the intention to respond to the needs of the county as a whole.

As for Kernohan's suggestion that the committee's actions are intended for the benefit of Dysart Hodgson reminded everyone that the money for the beds was a provincial initiative and not a municipal one.

However, committee member Doug Campbell agreed with the letter in saying the committee has strayed from its mandate.

"In the public's eye, we've turned our back on Hyland Crest and Extencicare whereas the directive from the ministry was to use existing facilities as much as we could. If we are spending public funds, then the decision has to be fair to all concerned."

Committee member Ann Wood suggested the committee launch a public awareness campaign with a press release.

"I think there is a lot of confusion over our mandate. And I think people have to understand that the recommendations made by the Steering Committee are just options, not givens," she said.

Wood also added that the public must be informed that no final decisions will be made until the feasibility study on the future role of the Minden Hospital and Hyland Crest is complete.

Trying hard to remember...

couple of weeks later I can't find them. That usually results in a panic cleaning attack. You'd think I'd learn.

I've never been good at names either. I can remember that in fourteen hundred and ninety-two, Columbus sailed the ocean blue because it's a catchy rhyme. But most of the rest of the historical names and dates were what kept me off the honor roll in high school. For some strange reason, lately I can remember what letter the names begin with. If someone is with me, given the initial they will recall the name, but, on my own I won't remember it for a couple of days.

At least I'm not alone. We should probably all wear name tags, if only we could remember to pin them on. A bright entrepreneur could take advantage of this malady and open a business embroidering people's names, decoratively on the front of all their clothing. Then when folks walk up to me on the street and start a conversation, I won't have to stand there trying to link what they are saying, along with the familiar face in front of me to a name, without the person guessing that while I am smiling and nodding at their comments, a voice inside me is yelling at my brain. "Who is this person?"

People feel slighted when you can't remember their names. It's embarrassing to have to 'fess up to it. I've even gone so far as to wait until the person has left, then asking someone near me who I was talking to.

Then there's the 'Why am I here?' syndrome. Don't tell me you've never found yourself standing in front of an open cupboard wondering what it was you came to get. And everybody has put something strange in the refrigerator at least once. Or started pouring coffee into the sugar bowl. Please tell me you've done that.

When these things happen to me, it's because on my way to the cupboard, I start thinking about something else, like an idea for a column. And if I don't go right then to a piece of paper, I lose the idea as well as what was in the cupboard. It's probably my brain's subtle way of telling me, "One thing at a time, old girl."

It's not just an aging thing, though. Lots of very young people do it too. But as we get older, we fear it might be a sign of senility or something as serious as Alzheimer's disease. Maybe we're all putting too much stress on our minds. Yet, scientists have always maintained that the human race is only using a very small portion of its brain capacity. Maybe the rest of it has atrophied for lack of use.

Whatever the cause, if I can remember, the next time I'm in the Minden health food store, I'm going to see if there is some kind of herbal tea that will sharpen my wits.

Tykes looking good

Haliburton Minor Tykes played their first game of the season on Saturday in Haliburton. Their coaches Glenn Fick and Joe Roberts summed up the action by saying "The Haliburton Minor Tykes are looking good."

Minden started the scoring early in the first period and kept the play mostly in the Haliburton end. Haliburton goalie, Josh Fick, came up with some great saves to keep the scoring down.

The Haliburton Tykes really came on in period 2. Quinn Ryan, Nick Judge, Matthew Roberts, Andy Dawson and Dylan Metcalfe kept slamming the puck into the Minden end until Haliburton had two goals on the scoreboard. Kyle Boughner found the net twice assisted by teammates Joey Sisson, Kyle Espie and Greg Nimigon.

Third period play had the fans screaming. However Minden held the lead all the way. Final score Haliburton 2, Minden 8.

Game 2 is Fenelon Falls at Haliburton, Sat. Oct. 31 at 10 a.m.

So who sent the bulky, slick referendum packages to every councillor and Reeve in Haliburton County?

No one seems to be sure of the origin of the parcels that landed on the desks of over 50 local politicians last week. Except for a card saying "Compliments of the Opposition," there was no indication of who was responsible for what Glamorgan Reeve Beverly MacDuff calls "a waste of time and money."

The packages included 100 forms documenting the Constitution and a videotape with both an English and French message.

"The cost of this is ludicrous and unwarranted," said MacDuff who estimated in Ontario alone, a package for every councillor would amount to thousands.

"The cost for this must have been horrendous. And it comes out of our pockets. The taxpayers are paying for this."

MacDuff said even if the money for the packages came out of party campaign contributions; it was the taxpayers who donated that money in the first place.

Some councillors didn't even bother opening up the parcel. Most Canadian citizens have already received copies of the proposed constitution and as for the video tape, well, Anson, Hindon and Minden Deputy-Reeve Lewis Stevens joked that because it is only 15 minutes long, it is even too short to tape over.

Doctor seeks support for petition

Hyland Crest to accommodate such services. I am highly skeptical as to whether such plans are genuine. Rather, I suspect that there is more likely a plan to simply close Minden Hospital and then, after the closure, the proposed addition to Hyland Crest may perhaps never materialize.

St. Joseph's Hospital claims this proposed addition would have curtains separating each cubicle "like an I.C.U." (Intensive Care Unit). This is a smoke-screen, and absolutely ludicrous. "Curtains" don't make an I.C.U. Cardiologists, Anaesthetists, surgeons, I.C.U. nurses and technical facilities far beyond the cost of the present Minden Hospital make an I.C.U. None of these specialized experts are locally available. If enough people believe this "I.C.U. nonsense, it will indeed be "Curtains" for Minden.

A very crucial issue which was not clear to everyone is that this proposal means the elimination of in-patient beds currently available at Minden Hospital. The loss of these beds would be truly disastrous for the Minden area. Currently, we can admit patients into hospital with our present in-patient beds and treat them for a variety of different acute illnesses, such as heart attacks, congestive heart failure, pneumonia, strokes, dehydration, diabetic complications, kidney infections and several other conditions, too numerous to mention, with state-of-the-art monitoring, intravenous medications and excellent individualized nursing care.

We provide excellent palliative care for cancer and other terminal diseases when no cures are available. Here, we keep such patients comfortable with painkillers so they don't have to suffer. For these patients, they now have the right to die with dignity, with support from their family members, friends and other loved ones in their own home-town hospital, where they receive compassionate personalized care which is second to none.

Minden Hospital is strategically located right next to Highway 35, providing excellent access to victims of traumatic motor vehicle accidents. In 1990, there were 895,000 vehicles that passed by Minden Hospital on Highway 35. Survival for these trauma patients depends on excellence in the emergency management in the first hour of their care, known as "The Golden Hour". At Minden Hospital we have that ability to provide life-saving measures to these trauma victims. We secure an adequate airway and provide oxygen. We stop any bleeding. We start IV fluids and provide blood transfusions. We treat collapsed lungs with chest tubes. X-Rays are done and we immobilize fractures. All these measures are absolutely essential to save the patient's life. If the patient has a ruptured spleen, or other surgical presentation, it is the initial stabilization outlined above which keeps the patient alive until reaching the appropriate surgical facility.

Cardiac arrest victims must be defibrillated with electric shock to restart the heart as soon as possible. After the heart has stopped for more than six minutes, there is irreversible brain damage. Over the years, we have had several successful resuscitations at Minden Hospital, in which the patient would not have survived if the patient had to be transported to a distant hospital.

The Minden Hospital is an accredited Hospital, which means that it meets the standards of excellence by the Ontario Hospital Association in quality of health care.

The Minden Hospital currently risks closure on a change of role, because of financial deficits incurred by the St. Joseph Hospital System. If Minden Hospital closes, the dollar saving to the Ministry of Health will ultimately be minuscule compared to the astronomical increase in cost to the ambulance service necessary to transport patients to and from alternative hospitals, so therefore, there is no ultimate savings but simply an added expense in return for elimination of presently available services.

Deficits are present at almost every other hospital in the province. Yet almost no other hospitals are under threat of closure. These other hospitals which will remain open are nowhere nearly as isolated as Minden Hospital. We have 9,298 people currently being served by Minden Hospital as permanent residents. Of these 2,052 are over age 65 years. There are 17,155 seasonal residents, which gives us a total of 26,453 residents served by our Hospital. Also, we can not overlook the motorists that travel Highway 35. Our isolation makes the need for the survival of Minden Hospital desperate.

If Minden Hospital closes, lives will be lost as a consequence. I am by no means stating this as a "scare tactic" to convince you to support Minden Hospital, but strictly to inform you of the inevitable outcome. We are isolated and delay of urgently needed emergency care will result in pointless suffering and even deaths. Whoever denies this ultimate inevitability is simply deluding themselves and others.

If you want to stop closure or altered function of this home-town Hospital that we are all very proud of, I ask for your support to go the Minden Medical Centre, or Rhodes Medical Centre to sign the petition protesting the closure of relocation of services of Minden Hospital.

We're looking for 100% support. We cannot sit passively by.

Dr. Stephen Dawson,
Minden.

No one admits sending package

On a more serious note, Warden George Simmons agreed that the initiative was an ill-conceived one.

"Because of the recession and because government has lost touch with the person who is unemployed, and when you look at the cost of this and when you have business laying off staff, the prospect for the working man is nil. He's getting aggravated."

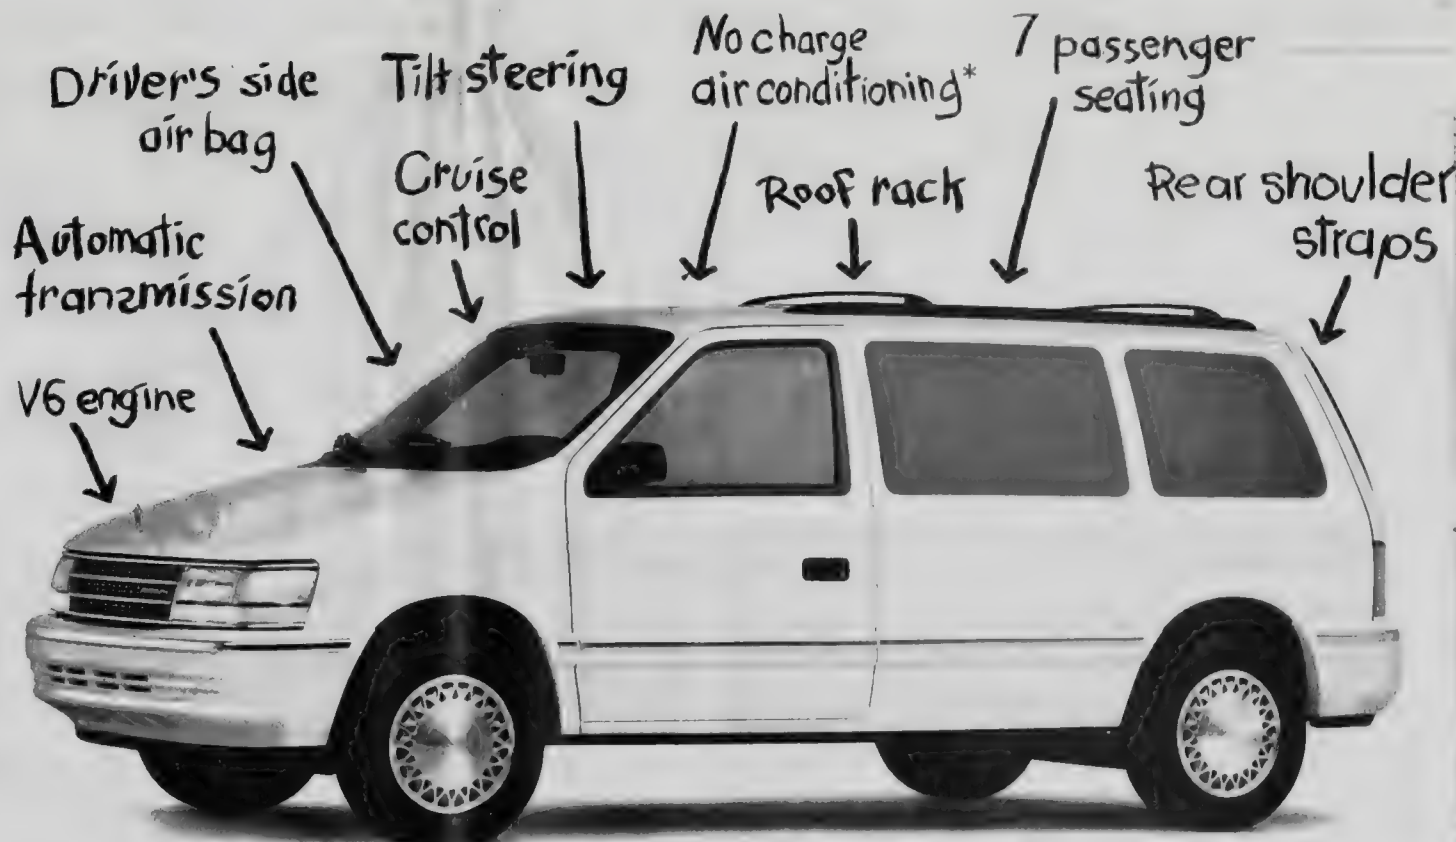

Calls to both provincial office of the Federal Liberal Party and the Head Office of the Official Opposition failed to shed any light on this mystery. No one seemed to know about this package or how much this excessive exercise in democracy cost.

Honours — and — Awards Night

Thanks to many donors, the high school's top achievers earn $20,000 in bursaries, scholarships and awards

THEY HAD TRIED their best. They had studied and worked hard. They had contributed to many aspects of school life. And now it was time to reap the rewards.

The Haliburton Highlands Secondary School hosted its annual Honours and Awards Night on Saturday. "It's a time to honour students with outstanding academic achievements and to express thanks to the donors who made it all possible," organizer Walter Tose told the large crowd.

More than $20,000 in scholarships, bursaries and prize money was presented to 120 proud students. It is a reflection of this county's belief in its young people that so much money has been made available through the years.

Drama fest sets stage for an entertaining weekend

FESTIVAL. WHAT DOES this imply to you? Does it conjure up images of fun, entertainment and parties? Indeed it probably brings all these things to mind but it should also bring forth the word competition. Highland Drama Fest '92 will definitely have all these characteristics.

You may recall recent articles about the origins of the Eastern Ontario Drama League (EODL) and its festivals. On November 6 and 7, 1992, the Highlands Little Theatre has the honour of hosting the annual one-act festival on behalf of the EODL. Competitors and their support groups will be coming to Haliburton from Bancroft, Carleton Place, Lindsay, Peterborough, Picton and Trenton. This will be a very busy and exciting weekend for our theatre group not only as hosts but as competitors ourselves.

In the past, the Highlands Little Theatre has entered only one other one-act festival. In October, 1990, we travelled to Lindsay and performed "Mother Gets Her Wings" at the Academy Theatre. We were very fortunate to be nominated in nine of the eleven categories and came home with three awards. This time we will be entering a comedy entitled "The Three Million Dollar Lunch" by Fred Carmichael. It features five ladies, three veterans and two newcomers to the group, and is directed by Doug Brohm.

The schedule for the weekend is rather hectic but the lineup of plays looks very interesting and entertaining. Haliburton will be performing on Friday, November 6th, with two other groups beginning at 8:00 p.m. The Mississippi Mudds of Carleton Place will be presenting a drama entitled "The Stone Water Rapture" and the Trenton Community Players are performing another drama, "Scent of Honeysuckle". On Saturday, November 7th, beginning at 1:00 p.m. there will also be three plays. Living History Productions from Picton will be presenting an original drama, "The Prize As Attached", the Bancroft Theatre Guild, our neighbours to the east, are bringing a short drama called "Sailing", and rounding out the lineup for the afternoon, is a comedy by the Peterborough Theatre Guild, "Visitor From Forest Hills". Saturday evening will bring a slightly shorter program of two plays. Beginning at 7:30 p.m. the Lindsay Little Theatre will present a drama, "The Return", and following this, the Picton group will return with another original play, a comedy, "Happy Trails".

Also unique to festivals is the social aspect. Following the Friday and Saturday evening performances and public adjudications, there will be a "green room". There is a small admission charge to these rooms to offset the cost of the finger foods that are offered, and it is here that casts, crews and audience members can meet, mingle and discuss theatre and in particular the plays just seen. After the Saturday evening performance, there will be some light entertainment presented prior to the award presentations. Your admission ticket to the plays includes this part of the evening as well.

The Festival Committee and the Highlands Little Theatre are looking forward to welcoming the EODL members, the six other community theatre groups and their supporters to Haliburton County. We encourage all Highlands Little Theatre supporters to come out and be a part of this festival weekend. Hometown support in any competition is very important and always most welcome. Hope to see you there and enjoy the show!

For further information and/or tickets, call 457-1028 between 10:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. (Mon.-Fri.) and 457-1235 after 6:00 p.m.

Kids put energies into Vessels

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

AT FIRST, YOU'VE GOT to appeal to kids on a level they can understand. Holly Hutchison, curator of the Rails' End Gallery in Haliburton, is introducing the school children to the gallery's exhibit called Vessels. After ascertaining that vessels are things that hold something else, she asks them what vessels they have at home. There are the typical answers of toy boxes and cereal bowls, but then she asks what about the bathroom. "The bathtub" is the first response but after a few seconds, the response is much more practical, for children at least. "The toilet!"

Now there aren't any toilets in the exhibit, but there are painted garbage cans and clay bowls with feet and glass jars with dancing people. The point is that everyday vessels can be made into fanciful works of art.

As Christine Bailey's Grade 3 class entered the exhibit room, the curator told them there are two rules to follow. "The first rule is don't touch. If that's difficult for you, keep your hands behind your back or in your pockets. The second rule is you have to talk with your friends about what you see and what you like and don't like."

"Holy... cool... neat... these are pretty," the children exclaimed as they followed both the rules, walking between the displays of reed, clay, glass, paper and metal vessels.

But having talked to children from the classes which had already visited the gallery earlier in the week, the children were eager to move on to the next part of the discovery program - making their own vessels under the guidance of local artist Jan Murray.

Murray has four pieces in the exhibit, all made out of paper. It was her job to show the children how you can turn something flat - a square piece of an old file folder - into something three dimensional such as a box. With fingers a bit too small to be nimble, the children folded the piece of thick paper, pushed down the edges with a popsicle stick, and gingerly pulled back the two resulting two flaps to reveal a box. Creativity was let loose as they used glue, paper, paint and crayons to decorate their one-of-a-kind boxes.

"It's fun because it looks neat," says Ashley, who has enjoyed the outing. "I'm proud of what I made."

"I feel good about myself," agrees Alanna. "I try my best and I think I made something nice."

It's comments like these which makes the program worthwhile for Hutchison and Murray. "It's so fun working with children because it's 'Oh, I can do this!'" Murray says.

Heating in the Winter. Air Conditioning in the Summer. It's all there, right under our Feet.

If you want to reduce your electric heating bill, look down at your feet. Now look a few feet further. Look at the earth itself. It could be your next source of heating and air conditioning.

Ground source heat pumps are designed to draw heat from the earth and pump it into your home. In the summer, the ground source heat pump reverses its operation. It extracts heat and humidity from your home and pumps it into the earth. The excess heat can also be used to heat domestic hot water or swimming pools and hot tubs.

This is truly the cleanest most efficient way to heat and air condition your home. And while ground source heat pumps cost more than traditional furnaces and air conditioners they soon pay for themselves with savings. That's why today's progressive home builders and renovators are specifying them for their clients.

Call us for more information about ground source heat pumps. You'll see that one of the most advanced technologies in heating and cooling is as old as the earth itself.

Lake Trout spawning at bridge is a sight

Dorset

Phyllis Briscoe - 766-2237

Sorry we didn't get Paul's birthday in last week. Paul had a birthday Oct. 20th. We hope he had a happy one and has many more.

The lake trout have been spawning under the old bridge, as they do each fall. If you can spot them, which is easier when it is sunny, they are a sight to see, packed in like sardines on the piers under the bridge.

Dorset Seniors is having its annual Halloween party on Wednesday, Oct. 28th at 7:30 p.m., come in costume if you can, it makes for more fun. This will be the last evening meeting until the spring. Beginning Wednesday, November 4th, the meetings at the club will begin at 1:30 p.m. in the afternoon.

The Thanksgiving weekend was quite pleasant weatherwise, although there had been dire predictions of rain and cold temperatures. We don't mind when the prognosticators err in the right direction. The colored leaves were just perfect for decorating and the churches were beautiful and were well filled as so many summer residents had made their last trek north to close their cottages for the winter and to say good-bye to their local friends.

Irene and Jack Clayton had a trip recently to New Liskard. This is more or less an annual trek to visit Irene's 90 year old uncle, who is still very active and mentally alert.

The annual Christmas Bazaar will be held on Saturday, November 28 at the Dorset Community Centre from 2 to 4 p.m. This Bazaar has been an annual event for over 35 years and was originally sponsored by the two churches, Know United and St. Mary Magdalenes Anglican. Later, the guide groups participated and more recently other non-profit groups have tables. There is always a great variety of knitted articles, various craft objects, Christmas baking, something for everyone's needs or desires. A great place to buy Christmas gifts.

The annual children's Halloween party, sponsored by the Dorset Lions club, will be held Sat., Oct. 31 at the Dorset Recreation Centre

Beauty colours artist's fondness for Highlands

by JILL SAWYER

Staff Reporter

ANDREA END HAS JUST finished painting the last of her series of Haliburton County landscapes. It's a view of the Gull River rapids, and it shows the quick movement of the water, surrounded by the bright points of colour in the Autumn birches and maples. The only thing is, the painting is so close to Andrea End's heart that she can't bear to sell it yet.

She finished painting it a week ago, getting ready for her show at the Rails' End Gallery, which opened recently. "I haven't had much time to just sit back and look at it."

For her, the Gull River painting is a "summary" of two years she spent living in Minden, where she saw her artistic style evolve and change. Her show is a retrospective of several different styles she's played with during the past four years, which she has spent following her two passions: painting and travel.

Although End was a student at the Ontario College of Art in Toronto for two years, she decided to leave art behind, instead travelling through France and learning to speak French. She never went back to school.

She had been studying graphic art and advertising, learning about the use of colour and shape, but after she left school she decided she didn't have an interest in any type of art.

After returning from France, she took a job with VIA Rail, which she loved, and worked in the travel industry for three years. She doesn't know exactly what it was that made her pick up her brush, but says that her family's positive reaction to that first painting sparked her interest in pursuing her art again.

"I couldn't tell you why I started painting again," she says. After her second painting, she started to gather momentum, finishing one piece while the next idea was already forming in her head.

The walls of the Rails' End are lined with End's paintings, each one strikingly different from the next. A stark, boxy view of a European village street leans next to a lush, detailed Haliburton landscape.

"I don't sit outside and paint what I see," she says. "I start with the colours. I get an idea in my head of the colours I want to paint, and then I think of a scene that will match those colours.

"I always have a very good idea of what I want before I sit down and paint. I know where I want the cold, blue areas, and where I want the warm yellows. Then, by the time I sit down to paint, it all comes out very easily. I've painted it in my mind before I even start."

"Colour is the real motivating factor for me," she says. She uses a type of paint called gouache, which is an opaque watercolour. It gives her work a very solid, defined quality, unlike the faint, misty appearance of most watercolours. The shapes are very clear and bright, almost like posters or lithographs.

End moved to Minden in the fall of 1990, after her job at VIA Rail ended. She had been coming up to her parents' cottage on Gull Lake since childhood, and had always loved the Highlands. She was also anxious to get out of the big city.

"At that time I wanted to put painting foremost," she says. "Before that, travelling and jobs had always been more important to me."

She moved into the Stone House, a summertime bed and breakfast off Highway 35 outside Minden. She leased the house for the winter, and found a part time job in Haliburton.

One of her more recent paintings shows the Stone House, pocketed in the midst of a thick of forest.

"I've moved around a lot since I was 18 or 19, and I'm always sad to leave a place, but leaving Haliburton was by far the saddest. I've never appreciated the change in the seasons as much as I've enjoyed it here. I look forward to different seasons so much. I'll always come back to this place."

End has moved to Richmond Hill to be with her fiancé, and hopes that the show will wrap up her time in Haliburton. "I'm excited to see what happens next," she says. She expects her style to continue to change as she travels more. "Things change in life, and that will reflect in the painting."

This is her first solo show at the Rails' end. During her two years in Minden, she had pieces in the various Guild of Fine Arts Shows, such as the summer sale and the Christmas show, but she's happy to have a chance to conclude her time in Haliburton. "It all fits together nicely," she says.

The Gull River painting may not be for sale yet, but viewers can see the evolution of End's work and the inspiration she gathers from the colours in her mind. The show runs to November 14.

Tickets are available for the Highland Hands fashion show. Cost is $12. Tickets are not sold at the door, so be sure to have yours available to present at the time: 2:30 p.m. at the Legion on Nov. 15. Afternoon tea follows the show of handcrafted apparel. It is always a creative display of talent, originality and colour.

The fall conference sponsored by the Deanery of Victoria-Haliburton was held at Maple Sands on Oct. 16, 17. The subject was evangelism, the speaker the Rev. Brian Parker. Friday evening began with the Rev. Christopher Greaves and two other musicians on various instruments, playing and singing some first class entertainment appropriate to the occasion. The Rev. Susan Tait our regional dean of Fenelon Falls closed the first of the three sections with the service of Compline. A generous lunch was served around the dining room while everyone caught up on parish news. The two other sessions of the conference on Saturday completed the weekend.

The funeral service for Annie Jones was held at the Minden Funeral Chapel, the Rev. Rob Luxton officiating. Liza Frausel and Bev Moss, Leon and Alice's daughters, were able to be present to join the congregation.

On Sunday, Oct. 18, Rev. Christopher Greaves welcomed Kristen Sisson officially as server at Communion services, this being Kristen's first time in this role.

Irene Scott has just phoned with the sad news of the death of her brother-in-law, Maurice Scott. He was Oscar Scott's youngest brother, and was pre-deceased several years ago by his wife Kay. At the time of his sudden death he was living at Macgregor, Manitoba with his sons. The funeral took place on Wednesday near Orillia where his wife had been buried. He would have been 73 on Nov. 11, 1992.

Camelot tickets are available at Paulette's Haliburton and at the Health Food Store in Minden.

Do you ever get the impression that my interests are largely theatrical, musical and theological? If you are new to the community and wonder how to feel as if you belong, come to a meeting, and general meeting of little theatre, concert series, church, or West Guilford Centre meetings. Wilberforce does Beating of Retreat

by LINDA NORTON

On Sunday, September 20th, 1992, the Douglas C. Hatch Branch 624 of the Royal Canadian Legion presented their second Annual Beating of the Retreat ceremony in front of the branch. The ceremony was organized and co-ordinated by the 1st Vice-President and acting Sergeant-at-arms, Charles Harflett. The parade consisted of a guard of 26 Army Cadets under the leadership of Chief Warrant Officer Jeremy MacDuff from 1129 royal Canadian Army Cadet Corps in Haliburton and a contingent of Ordinary and Associate members from Branch 624 and any other legionnaires who were present.

On the reviewing stand were the branch President Joyce Gillies, the Zone F5 commander Larry Craighead, and other visiting dignitaries. Comrades Gillies and Craighead reviewed the parade accompanied by CWO MacDuff and Comrade Harflett, after which the Bancroft Pipes and Drums entertained the dignitaries and the spectators.

The drummers then beat the retreat, and immediately afterwards the pipes then played the lament while the flag was slowly lowered by Comrades Harflett and Fred Meharrie. After the flag was lowered permission was received from Comrade Gillies to secure the flag for the night. The branch banner was then paraded out carried by comrade Joan Dickson. the parade was then marched off, led by the pipes and drums.

Everyone was invited inside for some refreshments prepared by the Branch 624 Ladies auxiliary.

Although the crowd was not as large as last year, those present all said that it was a very impressive ceremony.

SUNDAY BEST: Grenville Draper leads the Colour Party of the Royal Canadian Legion Branch 129 during last Sunday's parade to the Haliburton United Church. Following in neatly behind are Legion comrades, the Ladies Auxiliary and the Cadet Corps. They were a fine addition to the Sunday services.

Plans underway for busy November 11

The Canada Volunteer Award was established by Health and Welfare Canada in 1977 to recognize and encourage those Canadians who have made outstanding voluntary contributions towards improving the health and social well-being of their fellow citizens.

nominate candidates. The Committee requires:

- 1) a completed "Application Form",

Young woman becoming known as a model

Wilberforce

Flo Elliott - 448-2618

A few weeks ago the Echo ran an article about a local fashion model, Loreena Rogers, and we all were very happy for her. At this time we didn't know that we have a model from Wilberforce as well. Mary-Anne Jordins, daughter of Pat and Patty Jordins, graduated from the fashion modeling course at Sheridan College in Oakville in June of 1991. She came home for a few months and then decided it was time to get going with her career. So in October 91, she moved to Ajax and started to work in a do-nut shop to earn the money for photo-shoots to complete her portfolio and "comp-cards", which go to various clients for their files. She then joined Penny Noble Modeling Agency (chosen by five out of eight agencies).

Work then began to come her way and she has done the following modeling jobs: A music video with a jazz group called Nexus; modeled $7,000 bridal gowns for news program "Eye On Toronto" at the Timothy Eaton Church; mannequin modeling at SkyDome for Nevada Bob golf show; modeled Christmas party dress for Canada A.M.; she was in the K-Mart flyer the week of October 4th; last week modeled at Metro Toronto Convention Centre for trade show sponsored by Best Western Hotels; Has auditioned for Sears, The Bay, Beef Information Board, numerous magazines and T.V. commercials, as well as scouts from Japan.

After all her hard work, it must be very encouraging to Mary-Anne to see her career beginning to pay off. The whole community wishes you great success in the future.

The Euchre Party sponsored by the Senior's club was on October 16th at 7:30 in the Lloyd Watson Centre. The most lone bands (seven) went to Nancy O'Neil; good for you Nancy. Ladies high; Maurine Finlay. Men's high; Wally Baker. Low score: Phyllis Bowen; and the door prize was won by Luella Hogan. Congratulations to all the winners. The next card party will be on November 20th, same time same place.

The line dancing is still going on and takes place on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Lloyd Watson Centre. This is not just for Seniors, it's good exercise for all ages. All are welcome to come and join in the fun.

The Legion has asked me to remind everyone that its Bingos are still being held every Thursday at the Lloyd Watson Centre. Some bingo games in the area have closed for the winter and the Legion invites all players to come and join them. As long as the crowd continues, the Bingos will keep going.

Just a reminder that the annual Christmas Craft sale takes place on November 7th, at the Lloyd Watson Centre. There are so many lovely articles to choose from that it is a big help with the Christmas shopping.

Last week I have the names of the people who received certificates for their contribution to Haliburton Home support in the past. The following people also received certificates: Irma Bowen, Ethel Mitchell, John Noble, George Grant, Clarence Bradley. I'm sorry I didn't know about them last week. We send our sincere congratulations.

The art classes conducted by Claire Loft will begin at the Harcourt Community Centre on Monday evening October 19th from 7 to 9. On Tuesday afternoon they will be from 1 until 3 o'clock. On Monday the 26th the classes will be canceled as that is the day we vote on the Accord, and the polling station is at the Harcourt Community Centre. However the art classes will still be held on Tuesday evening and every Monday afternoon thereafter.

Congratulations to Maurine Findlay, Margaret Ferguson and Gerald Shackleton who all received matching certificates in recognition of their contributions to the Haliburton Home Support Services at their 20th anniversary luncheon held in Haliburton on Tuesday October 6th.

The Sanderson families thought it would be nice to have a memorial to their son Danny, who lost his life in a car accident. And so in conjunction with the Agricultural Fair Board they decided to hold a literary contest for the children, as this was a subject that interested Danny very much. The children from Kindergarten and Grades 1 and 2 would do posters and the children from Grades 3 to 8 would write essays, the subjects of both posters and essays would be about the Agricultural Fair. The prizes were awarded by the Sanderson families on Saturday Oct. 10th before the Thanksgiving Dinner.

Justin Donaldson won first prize of $10 and Nicole Forget won $5 for second in the kindergarten class. For Grades 1 and 2 first prize of $20 went to Daniel Vanier and there were two second prizes of $5 each to Sandra Riley and Lauren Elliott. For grades 3 and 4 Patti Riley won $20 for her excellent essay.

The entertainment was provided by Gerard Mumford and Dorothy Sanderson, who is very talented and sang a beautiful song. The Sanderson families hope to see their memorial grow bigger each year and encourage all interested children to enter next year. The special memorial on each contest sheet is a reminder of Danny, and reads:

"This contest sponsored by the Sanderson families to encourage students to exercise their literary abilities and develop skills in art and writing. Your talents can be a living memorial to one who loved and practiced the skills of penmanship."

The Agricultural Fair is becoming a very popular event each summer and the Thanksgiving dinner that they sponsored last week-end was very well attended as well. Everyone knows this dinner is delicious and home cooked and great value for your money.

Mary Mumford of Harcourt won the quilt that was raffled by Our Lady Of Lourdes Parish. The doll house was won by Mr. Pilon of Apsley and the watch was won by Ann Marie Urquhart of Scarborough. Congratulations to all the winners and thank you to all who bought tickets, it was really appreciated.

Exchange fosters friendship with students from Quebec

SEVEC, the Society for Educational Visits and Exchanges in Canada, still has funds available to subsidize a substantial portion of transportation costs for group exchanges between Ontario and Quebec students.

SEVEC is looking for groups of Ontario students and their teachers who want to exchange with Quebec students. The students would take turns hosting one another sharing their homes, families, cultures and languages. Applications from elementary schools are particularly encouraged.

Schools wanting more information about this subsidized School Year Group Exchange program should contact SEVEC directly at 1-800-38-SEVEC and do it now before time and subsidies run out.

SEVEC is a national, not-for-profit association with more than 55 years of experience whose mission is to create enriching opportunities for young Canadians to develop mutual respect and understanding through programs of exploration in language and culture.

IN MEMORIAM

GIBBS, WILBERT — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather who passed away October 31, 1987. Gone are the days we used to share. But in our hearts you're always there. The gates of memory will never close. We miss you more, than anyone knows. With tender love and deep regret. We, who love you will never forget. Sadly missed Marie and family.
